IT'S JUST BEGUN. The New School Year. New Investments. Arriving at Eastern, we found a new beginning — one of investments, self-interests and returns. Our beginning consisted of campus traditions and of trends set this year. Our goal was to find how to combine these traditions and trends to receive the highest Return on Our Investment.

Investments. As students, we invested ourselves to receive the highest return possible, socially, intellectually and morally. Because of the University's traditional beliefs, we found ourselves attending Saturday afternoon football games, studying in the ravine, meeting friends on the corner and involving ourselves in campus activities. However, we also made investments which began new trends at the University. The inauguration of a new president, the approval of a co-ed dorm in Martin Hall, the observation of Martin Luther King's birthday and the restoration of the campus beautiful also helped us to mature.

In combining these investments we grew as individuals as well as members of the University society, all the while continuing our search for the highest point of return.

As the year progressed, we developed varied interests, each one resulting in a return on our investment. Finding traditions, we went downtown on Thursday night and "Krogering" on Saturday, ordered pizza from Dominos and pulled all-nighters cramming for a test. Our individuality soared as we participated in the band, went rock climbing and played football. By making these investments, we discovered diverse self-interests which helped us develop our individuality.

Involvement encompassed the University, helping students invest their energy to learn outside the classroom. We gained lasting friendships from our involvement in Greek organizations, professional clubs or religious organizations. This involvement provided us with an excellent learning opportunity, resulting in a higher return at graduation.

Through our involvement at the University, we discovered how to develop our self-interests to maximize our social, intellectual and moral growth. Involvement in Homecoming activities and Hanging of the Greens preserved the University traditions while new fashions and more career-oriented attitudes set trends which led to new traditions. This involvement led to achieving our goals and bringing the highest

Much like the wind, organizations, socializing and personal relationships can cause the pupil to float in an uncharted direction. In order to control the balloon and reach the ultimate highs a balloonist and a student must stay in control at all times to reach that final high!

Each is unique in its own style; however, all are of the same basic structure. A balloon is spotted in the sky, and the colors and design of its exterior are eye-catching and interesting, much like a person. All

The Top of Things

Long hair on women and short hair on men illustrate a significant role in fashions.

Maples

Years ago most young men wanted their hair cut in crew cuts and girls wanted ponytails to match their bobby socks and cheerleading sweaters.

Then times changed, ducktails were in and without them men were just a little too clean cut. This brought a reaction from the feminine side of the style world. Just as men began to wear longer styles, women began to wear shorter ones.

Then came the sixties and the flower children. Both sexes began to wear long hair in rebellion against social conformity. This was the beginning of the uni-sex hairstyles.

Now in the eighties the uni-sex styles have diversified. Short hair is popular with both men and women and so is long hair.

There are now rat-tails instead of ducktails, and in some cases they have also replaced ponytails.

Instead of crew cuts there are mohawks and the Mr. T. look.

Color also plays an important part in today's styles. Some people have orange hair while others choose from a variety of colors or a combination of colors.

Of course, there are many people left who have not taken the plunge. There are still a few women in ponytails and a few men who still have that clean cut look that their mothers like.

Many of those people can be found on the University's campus. There are a few students who have chosen one of the "new" looks, but they are greatly outnumbered.

However, times will continue to change. Who knows what students will like in 20 years?

What was once greeted with fear was met with anticipation. The reappearance of Halley's Comet was more closely watched than any other celestial event in history.

Comets were once said to be the source of natural disasters. People believed that their lives were governed by the position of the stars and planets. If a cosmic object violated the established order of the heavens it was called a "sick star" (or disaster, from the Latin word meaning "ill star.")

The first sighting of Halley's

Comet was probably a Chinese report of 240 B.C. The comet has appeared every 76 years since then. Edmund Halley observed it in the 1600's and predicted it would return in 1758. He died 16 years before its return but his theory was proved when a German farmer spotted the comet on Christmas night 1758.

The 1986 return of the comet was its worst visit in 2000 years, according to Jack Fletcher, Director of Hummel Planetarium at the University. This is because when the comet was at its brightest, it was on the opposite side of the sun from the earth.

Nevertheless, working together, scientists from all countries compared photos and studied its composition.

The comet was viewed by millions of non-scientific people who weren't seeking to develop theories. Instead they were seeking only a glimpse of the long awaited comet in their attempt to touch a part of history.

LIVING THE DREAM

The third Monday in January of every year is a national holiday recognizing the birthday of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. He is considered by many to be a great civil rights leader, orator, and Baptist minister whose life commitments and sacrifices helped to change societal norms in America. He became the motivating force that encouraged individuals of all races and social classes to unify.

Dr. King preached about freedom, justice, love and equality.

Carr

His philosophy of non-violence exhibited by the thousands who participated in rallies, marches, and boycotts melted the icy hearts of the racists and separatists and allowed justice and truth to prevail in this land. It was obvious to all who knew him and revered him that Dr. King was a God-fearing man who believed that America would one day live up to the creed proclaimed in the United States Constitution.

was a memorable and an educational experience. The week's events included movies about the life and work of Dr. King, a candlelight service, commemorative luncheon and an evening tribute entitled "Living the Dream." There were many participants from the Richmond and University communities.

During this week many individuals signed pledges to dedicate or rededicate their lives to living out the true meaning of brotherhood and to doing what is necessary to make Dr. King's dream — a reality.

RALLY DRAWS SUPPORT

"Never before have representatives from every public and private college and university gathered with distinguished citizens to express support for education," said KY Gov. Martha Layne Collins. "With this unity of purpose and this spirit of cooperation, we cannot fail in our resolve to move higher education forward."

This upbeat statement by Collins had similarities to the enthusiasm expressed by the estimated 5,000 people who attended the Rally for Higher Education at the Convention Center in Frankfort on Feb. 5, 1986. The rally was a joint cooperative effort between Kentucky Advocates for Higher Education, the Council on Higher Education, the eight public universities, 13 community colleges and 21 independent colleges and universities in Kentucky. Their purpose was to apply pressure for more money for the universities.

Included in the crowd were an estimated 700 Eastern students who cheered loudly whenever the opportunity arose and waved their EKU paper fans proudly in the air when Eastern's name was announced.

"I thought it was great the way Eastern students cheered together," said Marci Strange, junior Special Education major from Bardstown, KY. "Eastern doesn't do that much together as a student body. Usually when we do something, it is with a separate organization within Eastern. This time it was the whole student body working for one goal."

"I thought it was great the way Eastern students cheered together," said Marci Strange from Bardstown, KY.

Collins remarked that the high school and university bands, balloons, and pompons reminded her of a "political convention, pep rally and old-time tent revival all rolled into one."

Collins' speech to the crowd was preceded by guest speaker James Hunt, former governor of North Carolina who gained national attention for his support of education. He stressed the idea that "Kentucky today is on a roll."

Collins agreed with that idea in her speech. "It's exhilarating to see such a large and enthusiastic crowd come out to support education."

Special incentives were offered to Eastern students who attended the rally. A Capital College Caravan of students and teachers went to Frankfort together and were led out of Richmond by a police escort. The Kentucky Advocates purchased a van that was given away during the rally to a Midway College student. A banner contest was won by the Sigma Chi Fraternity, and a $600 party at the Mulebarn was won by the Eastern group who had the most participants — the Panhellenic and Interfraternity Council.

"I'm glad we had the rally because it shows they're putting more emphasis on education, and I think that's important," said Strange. "Maybe they'll start to develop better programs since there seems to be more emphasis being put on education."

If the enthusiastic crowd in attendance at the Rally is any indication of the state's attitude concerning education, then programs will be developed to improve higher education and Kentucky's status in the nation will be improved.

RELATIONSHIPS: A Matter of Individuality

Everyone has a unique and special idea about relationships — how to keep one together, when to get serious, when to date around, and when to call it quits. It is often hard to convince someone that his ideas are wrong while yours are right.

Some students fall in love in high school and manage to hold a relationship together, even in the college scene. Others date in high school and find it too stifling to continue the relationship in college. Others prefer to give up school to maintain their relationship.

The different thoughts and feelings that people possess about relationships are what make it so interesting.

David Laughlin, a sophomore from Louisville, KY, said, "I dated a girl for two years in high school, and when I came to college, it was easier to break the attachment than to try to make it work."

It takes effort to make a relationship work. Many students become interested in the new experiences and the new people at college, and leave their high school sweethearts behind.

"I think there are so many things to learn in college; I wanted to learn all I could without being tied down," said Laughlin. "I was ready to party and be free."

This attitude is shared by many other college students. The commitments and relationships are set aside to be dealt with later. However, other students come to the University involved in a serious relationship, and they have plans of maintaining it, regardless of the distance between them.

"I'm happy with my boyfriend," said Cheryl Ballard from Bardstown, KY. "I've dated him for four years, and if I didn't have him, I don't think I'd be as happy as I am now."

Distance often becomes a major barrier in many relationships. "But I think if two people really care about each other, they're going to make it work, no matter how far apart they are," said Ballard.

This thought was echoed by Beth Jewitt, a sophomore from Ashland, KY, who recently married her high school sweetheart before he was stationed at a marine base in Japan.

"It's a challenge to keep the relationship going," said Jewitt. "I think the key to it is keeping the lines of communication open. Without communication, you have no relationship."

This was one of the main reasons Jewitt married her husband before he was shipped overseas. "Besides our love for each other, we were also influenced by the benefits we would receive from the military. I have my board paid here, and I'll also have travel expenses paid for me to go to Japan."

According to Jewitt, the military doesn't seriously consider a marine's girlfriend or fiancée because these relationships could end in a minute. "However, if you're married, it's a different story. They make all efforts to help us keep in touch. They always let me know where he is and what he's doing."

"I really miss him," said Jewitt. "When he's here, I feel a lot more secure and happier because I'm not missing him. I'm independent though and I like to look at it as a challenge to be able to survive on my own."

Missing the loved one seems to present major problems to many students. "It's really difficult for me to be away from my boyfriend," said Tonda Littrell, sophomore from Albany, KY. "I'm always moody when I'm away from him, and I don't want to do a lot of things because he's not a part of it."

Because of the difficulty created by being apart, Littrell has decided to get married this summer and continue her education by commuting to another college.

"I think I'll be a lot happier," said Littrell. "We've been dating for over five years and we've been planning on marriage for a long time. I think it will improve my grades if we can be together."

Different ideas, thoughts, dreams and goals are found at the University. Many people know what they want, while others remain confused. However, a lot of times these things can't be planned. They just happen, and each individual has to decide what's best for him or her without listening to what others think is best.

DOWN TOWN

When students get tired of studying, working and being cramped up in their dorm rooms, many of them have one destination in mind: downtown. "Downtown gives you the chance to relax, kick back and get away from school and homework," said Rebecca Smith, sophomore from South Shore, KY.

Downtown is an escape for many students, an outlet. But most of all, it's a place to have fun. "You can be wild and people won't think you're stupid; they just know you're having fun," said Sue Gladding, sophomore from Pocomoke, MD.

Many students go to the bars to dance and socialize. Everyone usually has his/her own favorite place to hang out. Two of the more popular bars are the Family Dog and O'Riley's Pub.

"I like the atmosphere at the Dog," said Scarlett Shumate, freshman from Vine Grove, KY. "I like the people that go there because there's more of a Greek crowd, and I like the music they play."

"I go to O'Riley's because a lot of my friends from UK go there," said Smith. "I like to party with them and dance and have a good time."

Some University students have their own unique reasons for going downtown. "I like to go play pool in the bars on First Street," said Jacquie Hellmann, senior from Park Hills, KY. "It's a good way to meet guys if you challenge them to a pool game. Some of them will look down on us because we are girls and they don't think we should know the rules; they are shocked when we do."

"First Street is different because there's no cover charge and there's a really relaxed atmosphere. We can go in sweats and still feel comfortable," said Hellmann.

At the beginning of the evening, many students go to Paco's, a Mexican restaurant located below the Dog.

"Paco's is a neat restaurant," said Carry Doyle, freshman from Maysville, KY. "They have a nice atmosphere and great food that's not really too expensive. I just go there for starters; then I go somewhere to dance and have fun."

Two of the newest additions to the downtown scene also include food as an added attraction. They are Bash Riprock's and BaJa Catina.

"Bash Riprock's is a place where you can go if you want to party, but it's also a place where you can bring your family," said Lisa Yates, senior from Bardstown, KY.

"I don't go downtown that often and when I do go, it's usually to eat so Bash Riprock's is a nice place to go," said Kim Harmon, senior from Fairfax, VA.

Harmon was also a part of an MTV video commercial that was filmed at Bash Riprock's. "They had free beer and free food so I went. It was a lot of fun!"

Besides the video, other special events were held which drew large crowds. One of the more popular events was the male review at J. Sutter's Mill.

"It was great!" said Jill Guter-muth, freshman from Louisville, KY. "It was really different. That's why I wanted to go."

"Everyone was screaming, hollering, and clapping, even the married women," said Jenny Magrane, freshman from Morehead, KY.

Some of the more popular events attended by the students included 99¢ Margaritas at Bash Riprock's; Beat the Clock at J. Sutter's Mill; WFMI night at O'Riley's; 50¢ Jack and Coke at T-Bomb's; and Dime Draft at the Family Dog.

"It's fun going to Dime Draft at the Dog," said Shumate. "It's cheap and there are not many people there. They also play good drinking music then."

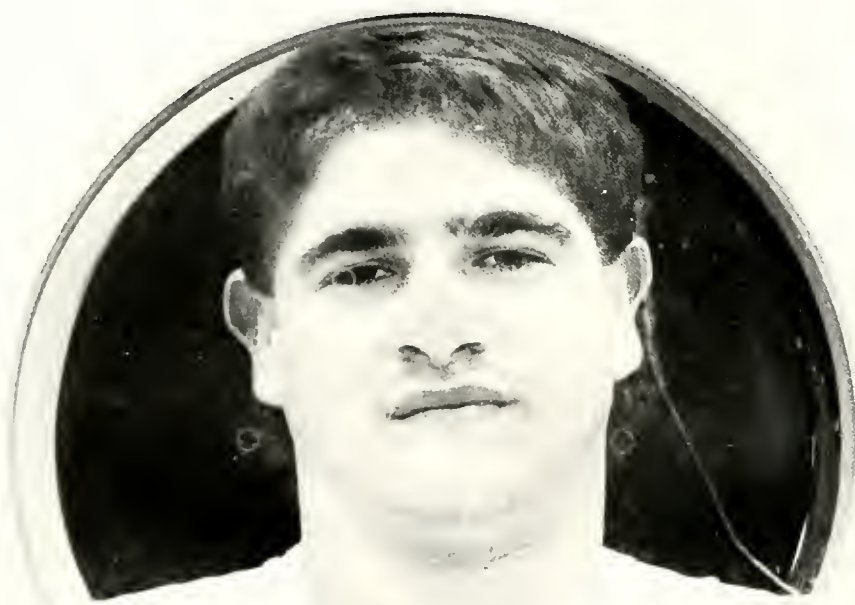

Downtown usually has something for everyone ranging from special drink prices and food to dancing, music, and the chance to see old friends and make new ones.

Whatever one's reason is for going, downtown Richmond remains popular with University students as well as students from nearby colleges and communities. It's a place to escape, to meet friends, to party, and a place to have fun.

Held hOStage IN the Laundry room

It began around noon as I awoke to the grotesque odor of burritos. I guess my drunken state from last night's festivities at Paco's (our local Mexican restaurant) had gotten out of control.

Well, this was D-Day (Detergent Day) and I knew it. Those clothes had to be washed, along with the rest of the evolving life forms inhabiting my closet floor.

The trek was to go where no student had gone before (Except for maybe twice a semester) — to seek out new life and new civilizations (in the lint traps). The laundry room experience was before me. This is something which the college student never forgets. It ranks right up there with your first collegiate hangover and having your wisdom teeth cut out. I knew that this was the true test — the survival of the fittest — the ultimate in competition.

I knew my first task would be to collect quarters. The search was on for the little tokens. First trying the Powell Grill and having no luck, my next option was Hamm's Gulf Station. The little man behind the counter must have seen me coming. He asked if a $10 roll was sufficient. I prayed to the Great Maytag Man in the sky that it would be enough!

Back in the room I found myself faced with yet another challenge. Did I dare open the closet to see what needed washing? Nope, I thought, I'll just pick up the clothes laying around the room and that will get me through until next semester. On my way out the door, after gathering together a couple of trash bags of my wardrobe, my roommate reminded me not to forget my Levis which were standing in the corner. I grabbed a textbook, my quarters, detergent and clothes and off I went. I entered the dreaded laundry room. As I walked in all eyes slyly lifted from textbooks and the grip of the highlighters were tightened as I vied for one of those washing machines. I knew it would be a tough fight but I was ready.

We all listened intently for the shut down of the washers and those insidious buzzers on the dryers; the stakes were high as we competed for those machines.

The afternoon grew longer and my highlighter grew dim. I began to wonder if I would ever escape this room. Was I being held hostage? I sat through spin cycle after rinse cycle after cycle after cycle.

It was a strange existence; however, I inserted my last quarter in the dryer and it slowly came to life as it sent my last load of jeans into orbit!

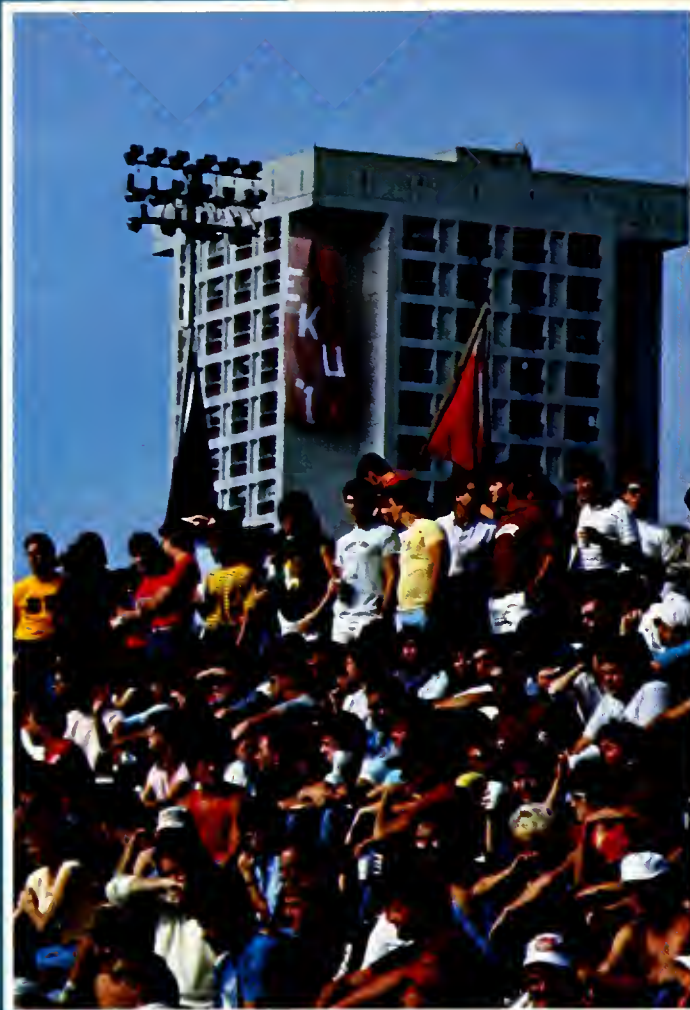

The final buzzer rang, but of course, as I pulled my Levis from the dryer drum, they were all as wet as they were when they went in twelve quarters ago. It was getting late and my roommate had come down to see if I was still alive. He suggested a trip to Taco Tico but I refused; however, I knew it was my only chance of escape.

I quickly gathered my life together. Once back in the room, I dumped the clean clothes beside the bed where I knew they would stay until I needed them. My mission had been accomplished and I had survived the laundry room experience.

The Rivalry Continues

Homecoming festivities were held throughout the week of October 21-26. This year's theme was "Fabulous Fads."

On Monday night, fraternities, sororities and other groups gathered at local warehouses to build their floats, which represented the overall theme.

The day of Homecoming, October 26, dawned with a beautiful sunrise. At 10 a.m. the annual Homecoming parade began.

Throughout the parade members of various organizations sold balloons for Juvenile Diabetes; these balloons were released at the Colonel's first touchdown.

Among the many high school bands, the floats glided down Lancaster Avenue onto Main Street.

A friendly competition was held between the organizations who made the floats. The Chi Omega sorority and the Kappa Alpha Order won first place with their float of a football player on a surfboard.

Before the game began the 1985 Homecoming Queen was announced and Julie Rees was crowned as her sister Jane's replacement.

The old rivalry with the Hilltoppers of Western Kentucky University was alive and well, as the Colonels defeated the Hilltoppers with apparent ease.

The final score of 51-21 was worthy of any homecoming game.

As Eastern fans anxiously awaited the announcement and crowning of their 1985 homecoming queen, four family members stood on the field with fingers crossed.

Jane Rees, the 1984 queen, stood with her escort, brother Jon Rees, both hoping that their sister Julie Gail Rees, the 22-year-old representative of Alpha Eta Rho, would make homecoming queens a family tradition.

Julie stood with her father,

Gayle H. Rees, who escorted her just as he escorted Jane in 1984. Julie wanted him to escort her as soon as she knew she was in the top 15. "I just love him so much I wouldn't have it any other way," said the new queen.

Julie, a member of Chi Omega Sorority and the show choir, hopes to achieve a career in music, but she is majoring in Computer Information Systems so she will have something to fall back on.

Investments and Christmas — two words which one usually wouldn't associate together. However, during the holidays, these words have a quantitative meaning. Christmas is a special time of year, a time which holds many meanings for many people. For some, Christmas is a time of giving and sharing. For a performer, these words have an even deeper meaning.

Being a performer is an outlet of expression, an expression of feelings of what Christmas means to each. This, a performer's gift to the season. Each has his own means of expression; however, music is a personal, intense, and internal means. As a poet interprets his feelings and emotions through words, a singer goes a step beyond, to bring those words to life through song.

Music is a reflection of all of what Christmas is — family, friends, gifts of joy, happiness and love. A special gift which is given at Christmas by a performer is one of important investment. A gift which is given to a performer is returned at this time through a joy which is brought to an audience.

This is a performer's unique gift of Christmas, the talent to perform. This talent has increased in value through a performer's personal investment of training, rehearsal, and experience.

On the University level, this investment is even more apparent. The campus is full of traditional looks at the Christmas holiday. Many events have become a part of University life through tradition. For example, the Hanging of the Greens, Handels' Messiah and the Madrigal Feast.

Each person involved in these traditions, either a singer, dancer, or musician knows of the in-depth investment which they hold.

The gift of love is an intricate part of Christmas and as a performer, this is a time when their investment can be shared with others, giving the performer, the return on their investment.

Much like the slow and painstaking construction process involved in developing a building, the University's first theatrical performance of the season "Working" was like a building. This show was built with great care and talent — from the ground up, just like that of a building.

stage: WORKING

The musical was adapted from the Pulitzer Prize Winning novel by Studs Terkel. The show was a representation of America's working class. The audience shared happy, inspirational, as well as sad and painful moments with the characters, as a slice of their lives, jobs and careers were brought to life on stage. The audience were transported to not just one setting, but many — from the factories, to the supermarkets, to the offices of corporations.

Department instructor Homer Tracy, designed and constructed this production with style and life. His direction and choreography were superb.

The production, loaded with talent, was truly a success in design for the University's Theatre Department. It was a show constructed with enthusiasm, care and style. It was apparent, because in the end the fine performances were there for all eyes to see — standing high and proud, just like that of a building.

An ancient story, set in an ancient land, however; the Bacchae lends itself to modern connotations. Euripides' characters are a portrayal of man then, as well as now, with modern conflicts. Dionysus is representative of what nature stands for. The conflicts arise from man's battle with man, and his battle against himself.

“The more things change, the more they stay the same.”

This quote holds true for many things, including students' attitudes concerning their education and their role in society.

In the 1950's the students were serious minded and were concerned about getting a quality education. There was a shift away from this feeling in the late 60's and early 70's. Students of the 80's have once again realized the importance of a quality education and have become serious minded like students of the 50's, according to Dr. John Rowlett, vice president for Academic Affairs and Research.

In the 50's there were a lot of Korean War veterans on campus, and a feeling of great national pride surrounded the area, according to Donald Feltner, vice president for University Relations Development. The students were more interested in preparing for their own lives rather than trying to change the world, said Feltner.

Then in the 60's the war babies flooded the campuses in large numbers. There were a large number of students searching for their "identities," and they became more socially aware of the world around them.

The idea of social awareness extended over into the 70's. Inflation played a big factor in making students become more career conscious and more aware of preparation for their lives, according to Feltner. "Once again in the 80's, students are mainly concerned about their education."

"I see a lot of similarities between the students of the 50's and 80's," said Dr. Donald Henrickson, professor of music. "One main difference is that there has been a communication explosion and we can see the whole world now. The students now have a lot more understanding and sympathy for the entire world."

"I think students of today have to be more disciplined because there are more distractions — television, automobiles, more activities, more bars and more things to do," said Feltner. Henrickson believes the sum of the problems that have occurred at the University were caused by these outside influences.

"However, I have never found a group of students at the University that has been hard to get along with," said Henrickson. "I am proud of their behavior."

A typical example of the students' responsible behavior occurred during a time when students at other universities were holding violent demonstrations in protest of the Vietnam War and the slaying of students at Kent State University. Eastern students held a candlelight march through Richmond and sang "Give Peace A Chance." They returned to the ravine on campus and kept an overnight vigil. Because of this unusual, peaceful demonstration a news release was written for the public, and in turn, Peter Jennings of ABC News did a news story on the University describing it as a campus at peace.

"We often hear people talk about 'going for the gold,' but I don't hear it much from the students I've taught," said Henrickson. "They like to have a good life, but they also want to do something they think is worthwhile. Their attitudes are very serious."

Thus, the students' attitudes have evolved into those similar to students of the 50's. "The more things change, the more they stay the same."

The notes and the flow differ for each instrument. The trumpet begins on C, the clarinet on F and the drums join in two measures later. Yet, to the listeners in the stands all the instruments combine to produce a harmonious sound of a familiar song.

Each cheerleader stands in her special area on the field, marked by a mental boundary. Although she performs the same routine as her squad, she is responsible for performing her special movement at the right time. If she forgets or hesitates, the routine seems choppy; if done correctly, the routine flows evenly and the squad projects unity.

and the search for friendships. Perhaps if we are off a note or two, no one will notice, however, too much dissension or lots of positive action affects the overall picture of the University.

Like the band, the cheerleaders and the football team, the University's team is made of unique individuals each playing their assigned parts. Yet, we as students, unite in classes, on campus and in the community to produce the harmonious sound of our University. We are Eastern Kentucky University.

Just as the instruments in the band and the cheerleaders on a squad differ in purpose and background, so do we, as students at the University, differ. We come from different lifestyles and perhaps different states. We pursue different majors and career objectives; business, psychology, journalism and on and on. Our interests lie in varied fields such as student government, professional organizations, greek life, jobs and religious organizations.

Yet we join together, like the band and cheerleaders, as University students promoting the unity of ECU. We work together for common causes such as academic excellence, involvement in campus activities

HISTORY

1906-1986 Changes in policies mark a "milestone" for Higher Education

The University's 1919 theatrical production of Of Mice and Men, by John Steinbeck.

As higher education marks its 80th year at the University, a multitude of changes in rules and regulations have affected the students since the 1874 Central University.

In 1906, upon approval of the General Assembly, Central University was changed to Eastern Normal School No. 1. The transition in the school characterized the improvement of quality education in Kentucky.

Dr. Ruric Nevel Roark is responsible for the cultivation of the new Normal School in the early years. In the 1907 Normal School Catalog most of the rules and regulations centered around the strict supervision of students' morals.

One rule in the student catalog stated the school was responsible for the morals of students, which included visitation among men and women students. Men were allowed to visit the women from 7:30 to 10:00 on Saturday night, and women were required to have chaperones if they went off campus at night. Women weren't allowed to call or visit the men's dormitory.

Among the rules dealing with the moral standards of students was a prohibition concerning tobacco and alcohol usage. This rule stated "tobacco-using hinders intellectual progress and ought not to be used in any form by students. The use of tobacco in any of the school buildings or on or about school premises is positively forbidden, as also is indulgence in intoxicating liquors."

Today the rules are not as strict as they were 80 years ago and don't deal with morals of students as much. Open house hours are arranged in each of the dormitories, so men and women are allowed to visit each other at specified times.

Regulating students' behavior is the focus of the rules in the eighties. These rules include the prohibitions of cheating, obstruction, disruption, obscenities, motor vehicles, dangerous weapons, drugs and alcohol.

The University policies have changed considerably over the last 80 years, and, thus, marking a "milestone" for regulations in higher education.

The Carpediem Society was a literary organization on campus which was started in 1910. The club published literary pamphlets and participated in debates.

The early 1900's showed women out of doors at the University canning the summer garden harvest.

In May of 1911, Richmond was the sight for a May Day Queen Parade.

The University Explorer's Club spent their Spring Break in the Florida Keys. All enjoyed camping on the beach and the spectacular sunsets.

Spring Break

It happens each spring. Suddenly there's a brief lapse in the frantic, frenzied life of the college student, and they are freed for a week. It's then that hundreds of thousands of them migrate south in droves toward the ultimate party paradise: FLORIDA. For so many of them the craving for sunshine and warm sand between the toes can be quenched in only one manner: cruise to Florida for spring break. The 1200-mile-journey is merely a small obstacle for these fun hungry students who have been pinned up with teachers, textbooks, and tests for ten weeks. It's an inspiring sight to see a river of cars packed to capacity, flowing south.

Once the Florida state line is spotted, options for excitement and insanity are endless. Most are lured to the seductive sights and bright lights of Daytona Beach or Fort Lauderdale. All that can be seen for miles are beaches infested by tanlines and muscular bodies worshipping the sun. Intense partying is the agenda.

But there are some who manage to escape the outrageousness of these culture centers, and have their sights set lower — The Conch Republic of Key West. Anyone who has experienced the Florida Keys knows how refreshingly different it is from any other place on earth. One is continually greeted with an endless array of tranquil and serene scenarios.

To be in a hurry is taboo in Florida. So why rush? Take time to experience a few nights of oceanside camping. It's fascinating to stroll along the massive coral structures each morning to see what Mother Nature washed ashore overnight. Go snorkeling or scuba diving in the midst of hundreds of brightly colored tropical fish. Key West has an original character unlike any other city. Where else does the whole city close shop to celebrate the sunset?

The trip back is 24 hours of sunburnt numbness and snack cakes. The realization of returning to campus life comes too quickly as battered weary bodies are carried back home. Minds begin to painfully drift back to where they were ten days ago, as the anticipation begins to mount for yet another trip south in twelve months.

off-campus LIVING

Togetherness may be nice and campus life can be fun but there are times when it gets a little too confining. The call of freedom and privacy leads to an uncontrollable urge to escape. It is then that the search begins for the key to happiness.

Living off-campus can give you that key. Independence and freedom go hand in hand with life away from the campus grind.

Ann Rudd, a senior finance/insurance student from Springfield, feels more comfortable in her apartment. "I enjoy apartment life over dorm life because I feel like a whole person rather than just a student. I can come home and relax, whereas in the dorm I always felt tense."

Having a place to call home is also very important to Mary McGill, a graduate student in chemistry. "The best thing about living off campus is having that space you know is yours. You can come home, kick off your shoes and really be home," said McGill. "It is difficult to think of it as living off-campus. It's just home."

Studying is easier in the more relaxed comfort of apartment life, according to Pam Scheeler, a senior marketing/management student from Greenfield, Ohio. "The atmosphere is more relaxed and a lot quieter for studying. You can have the privacy you want by going to another room."

"Apartment life is the next best thing to home," said

Maples

Scheeler.

However, despite the many joys of life off-campus there are a few problems and times when the key to happiness can seem a heavy load. "The disadvantages are the added responsibilities that accompany the freedom, such as paying bills on time and conserving water and electricity," said Scheeler.

Glenn Stover, a junior police administration major, pin points the problem most often mentioned by students who live off-campus. "Living off-campus gives you the ability to park your car near your house, but you can never find a parking place on campus."

Rudd agrees with Stover. "The major disadvantage to living off-campus would have to be the parking situation," said Rudd.

These problems do not affect the desire to live far away from the drag of campus life. "Freedom from the stifling rules of the dorm is well worth any hassle associated with living off-campus."

from dream to reality

The Chapel of Meditation began as just a dream of Dr. Robert Martin's. During the Christmas season of 1967 he discussed the idea with several of his colleagues. Then the idea was brought before the Alumni Association in January of 1968.

In January of 1968 the chapel became a reality. The plans for the chapel building were made, and the estimated cost of the chapel was to be $200,000.

By November of 1968, the funds for the chapel had been raised by the Century Club of the Alumni Association. The funds came from alumni members, faculty, staff, students, 24 states and four countries. Support for the building of the chapel came from the community as well as the University.

To build the chapel there were several problems that had to be solved. One of the problems was separation of church and state. To offset this problem the University deeded the property to the Alumni Association for improvements for five years. At this time the Alumni Association proceeded to build the Chapel of Meditation at a cost of $365,000. The chapel dedication ceremonies were held on May 13, 1972.

The chapel provides a place for people to just go and think. It's a nice place for one to go to escape from the pressures of life for a few minutes. The uses of the chapel vary from meditation to weddings. The chapel is also used by the religious organizations, sororities and fraternities at the University. The chapel's use is limited to alumni, faculty, staff and students.

The Lambda Sigma campus honorary for sophomores uses the chapel for their annual spring initiation. Former Lambda Sigma member Heather Braun said, "I found the chapel to be the perfect place for initiation because of its tranquil beauty."

ADPi sorority members use the Chapel of Meditation for pledge inductions, big sister ceremonies, etc. Sally Wilfret: "The chapel is a little more formal than the Powell Building and more convenient than having to go off campus to a church."

The chapel is under the care of Dr. George Nordgulen, who has been with the University since 1972.

The campus bookstore may look like a modern university store, but underneath the bright lights and orderly displays, there beats the heart of a friendly old general store. Friends meet over selections of books, food, posters and cards to talk.

Friendly smiles and open conversation are commonplace throughout the store. "It's a wonderful place to work," said Doris Forquer, who has worked in the store for 10 years. She said, "Ninety-nine percent of the students are great. They really make my day."

Betsy Wiseman has been with the campus store for 11 years. "I just like to make everyone feel at home," said Wiseman who tends to practice what she preaches. She added, "One time this girl was sick so I brought her some homemade soup."

Students appreciate the comfortable atmosphere of the store. "Sometimes I just go in and look around," said Robin Schweinhart, a senior biology major from Louisville. However, she rarely buys anything because she says she feels that she can get things cheaper off campus.

Ricki Clark, a senior journalism student, agrees with Schweinhart that things are often more expensive on campus. "The prices are high but it's very convenient because they catch the people who don't have cars," said Clark.

"I think the film developing was a good idea but I also think they need a refrigeration section for milk and things like that," said Clark. "I don't go in there as much as I did when I was an underclassman."

Despite the questions of price, students continue to frequent the store and enjoy the homey atmosphere. "The store workers are very friendly and they always try to help you," said Clark.

To many the store offers comfort and supplies as well as an occasional substitute mother. Family seems to be the key to the world found within the bookstore.

Initial Investment Yields in Final Payoff

College life, like a wise investment, requires an initial amount of capital, yet the dividends and eventually the final sale yields higher returns than the initial outlay.

Unlike a company, the capital for college life requires more than just money. College students invest their time, their intellectual abilities and for many students their soul and dedication as they work for the betterment of an organization or club. Yet for these investments students yield dividends such as a good grade in a major class, a leadership position in an organization or a valuable relationship.

For seniors, the dividends will soon culminate into a final return as they enter the working world. For some a career and financial success will be the return they receive. The education and skills they acquired at the University will lay the groundwork for them to begin on their road to career success.

Other seniors may use the same educational foundation yet decide to postpone their return as they pursue a graduate career. Through their educational investments, they will increase their marketability in the work world and thus yield higher returns.

Marriage and family life may be a return some seniors will realize in the near future. The personal relationships formed at college will lay the foundation for success and happiness in this path. Lifelong friendships will continue through the years for some as a result of the challenges and experiences shared with college friends.

And perhaps some seniors will display their individuality and pursue a unique adventure or career, such as playing professional sports, doing missionary work or traveling across the United States or Europe.

Whatever path a senior takes, part of the University will go with him. For the investment the student makes in his college career, whether large or small, will affect the dividends and returns he will receive during his lifetime.

For Head Coach Roy Kidd and the Eastern Kentucky University football team, the 1985 football season was a roller coaster ride full of dreams and hopes that were never fulfilled.

As the season opened on a bright and sunny day in September, so were the hopes of Colonel fans everywhere that this team would shine and bring back the brilliance that only a national championship could do.

With 37 returning lettermen and the addition of two highly touted transfers, there was ample reason to think that the Colonels might bring another championship trophy back to Richmond.

After beating Akron easily in the season opener, the Colonels were upset by one of the best Marshall University teams ever. This only made the Colonels tighten their belts and work harder.

When the Colonels posted back-to-back victories over Youngstown State and Austin Peay, hopes were again up to fever pitch. But a heart-breaking loss to Middle Tennessee brought sorrow to the players and had the coaches scrambling back to the drawing board to work some magic and win the rest of their games.

But it was not meant to be. After defeating Central and Western, Eastern lost to Murray State in a game it should have won. This loss all but dashed the Colonels' hopes of making the playoffs. Their only chance was to win their last three games by a convincing margin.

They proceeded to do just that. The Colonels won their last two conference games with victories over Tennessee Tech and Morehead. The season finale was against Louisville, a Division I school that wanted a win very badly. The Colonels dashed Louisville's hopes by thrashing the Cardinals in front of 5000 thunderous Eastern supporters.

But it was all to no avail. Two teams were chosen from the OVC and neither of them was Eastern. In the infinite wisdom of the selection committee Akron was chosen over Eastern even though the Colonels defeated the Zips earlier in the season.

For most teams in the country an 8-3 final record would be a cause for celebration, but for an Eastern football player it is a

Displaying Hard Work and Intense Play is Men's Basketball

When the 1985-86 version of the Eastern Kentucky University Colonel basketball team opened their season, there was an air of excitement around the campus. And why shouldn't there have been?

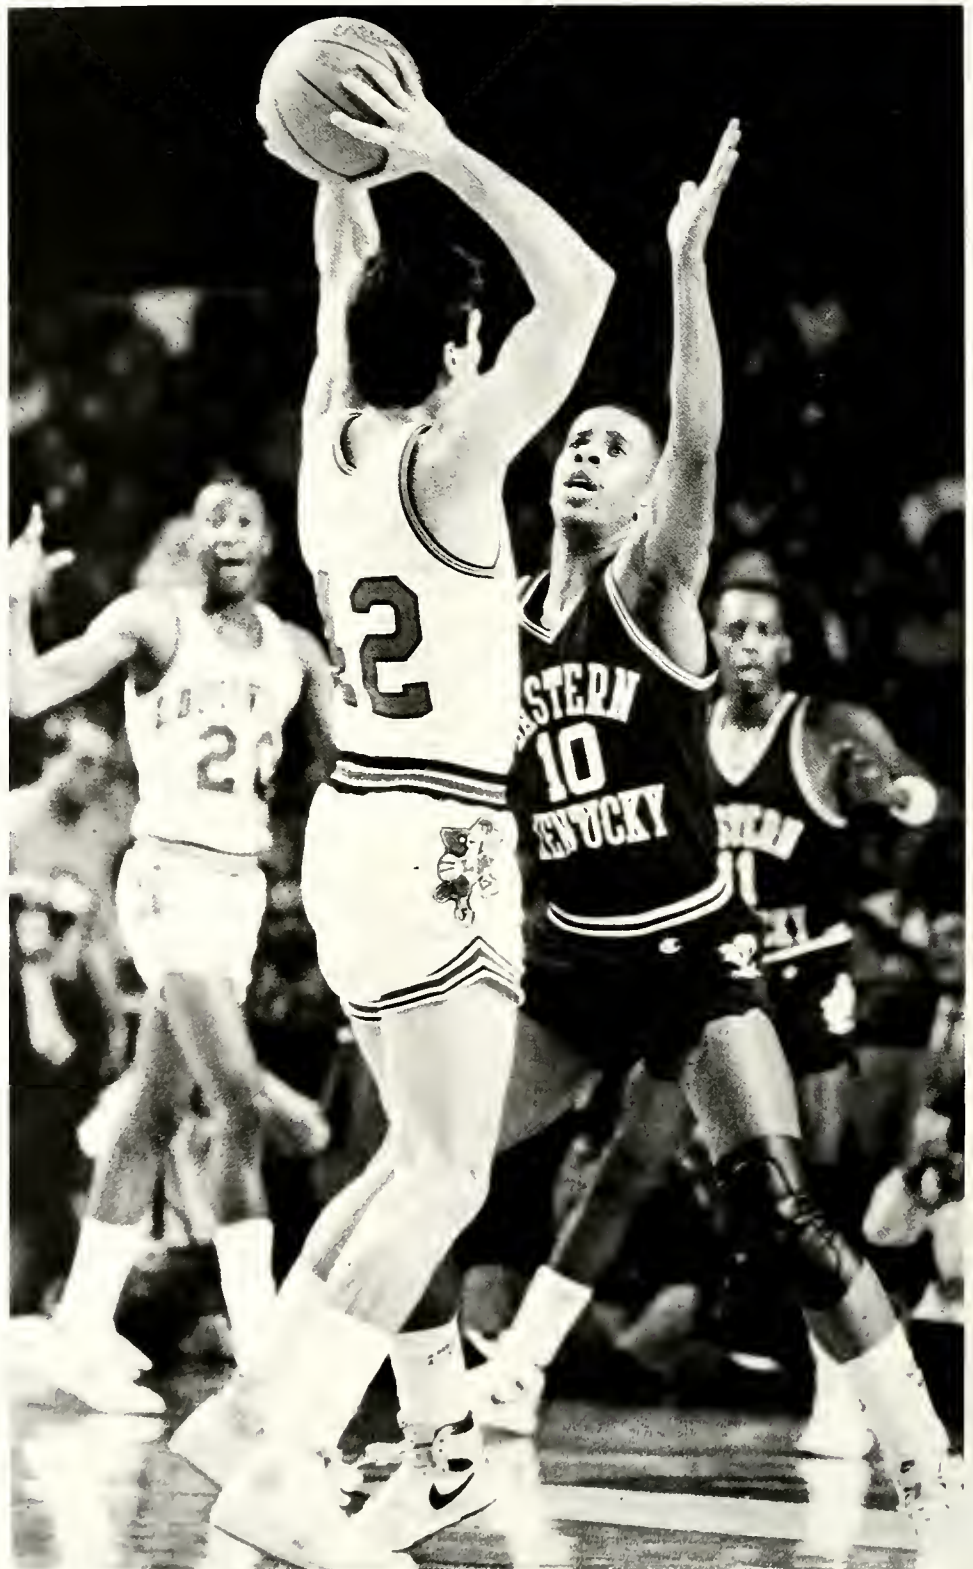

Eastern boasted a senior point guard with 4 years' experience in John DeCamillis. Along with John was guard Antonio Parris, one of the conference's leading scorers last year.

It was evident that this team could be a good one, but would it? The first of the season was up and down while the Colonels experimented with different line-ups trying to get the right combination. They seemed to have a chance to win almost every game but would have a hard time in the last minutes putting the opposition away.

As the season progressed, the team never seemed to gell. Lack of experience in the forward and center positions and a lack of depth all around spelled out the Colonels' downfall. Lady Luck never seemed to give this team a break.

The conference schedule was just as tough as ever, with the Colonels going 5-9. No team ever beat the Colonels soundly, but Eastern just couldn't put many of the close games in the win column. Injuries at crucial times to key players also hampered the team's ability to compete.

At the end of the season, Eastern had posted a disappointing 10-17 record. What you can't see is the hard work and intense play that this team displayed. The fact that they lost most of their games by just a few points was testimony to that.

Although the season was disappointing to players and fans alike, this team gave 100% and played an exciting brand of basketball that was a joy to watch.

Sharing a Total Team Concept is Women's Basketball

The 1985-86 season was a rebuilding season for the Lady Colonels. After setting a new school record with 18 victories last season, the team lost all five starters. Head Coach Dianne Murphy said that this year was "a totally new experience for the program in that, after two very successful seasons, we underwent major rebuilding."

The team members shared a strong "blue collar work ethic" according to Murphy. "They worked hard to rebuild a successful program. They had a belief in themselves and in each other."

Although the members shared a total team concept, Murphy cited Angela Fletcher, a senior guard, and Margy Shelton, a senior forward, as being "outstanding players." Murphy also said that Freshman Guard Tina Reece and Freshman Forward Pam Taylor were outstanding newcomers to the team.

Many factors combined to hurt the team's chances of having a winning season. There was a lack of depth that hurt the team at the end of their games. Also, key injuries hit the team at the most inopportune times.

Even though the Lady Colonels had a tough season, there were some high points. One of these, according to Murphy, was that "each of our players found out who they were as people and found out that they could do more than they thought they could. Overall, the season was a positive learning experience."

The team with unity is Field Hockey

After a disappointing season last year, the Colonels worked extra hard to make this year's season successful. According to Head Coach Lynne Harvel, "The team members believed in themselves. They trained hard over the summer, were committed to improvement and had a determination to make it a good year."

The Colonels achieved a record of 10-8-2 and were especially strong in the early season. The University upset Southern Illinois, St. Louis and Ohio University, all three of which are very strong teams. The team also tied Miami University. According to Harvel, "Miami, in past years, has always beaten us by more than four goals."

"All of the team members gave it their all. We got good performances from a lot of people," said Harvel. Siobhon Devlin, who is a senior, will definitely be missed. Devlin served as captain of the team and played goal-keeper. Traci Thompson had a very good early season and was a sparkplug for the team. D.D. Carley had an outstanding freshman year. She played exceptionally well. Carol Vanwinkle, a junior, also had a very good season. She played a link position which means she played both offense and defense. She showed herself as a team leader," said Harvel.

"The team had a lot of unity. Everyone played her hardest. Ev-everyone was committed to the same goal — a winning season. We surprised everybody," observed Harvel, "even ourselves."

Ranking in the Southern Region every week is Women's Volleyball

The Colonels had a very exciting year according to Coach Geri Polvino. "It was one of our best years," she said. "In the past, sometimes, we've played the schools instead of the volleyball team. This year was different. We went up against the giants and won."

The team finished the season with a record of 27-8. For the first time, the Colonels were ranked in the Southern Region every week. They also placed first in the Ohio Valley Conference for the fifth consecutive year.

Many team members made outstanding contributions to the success of the team. Senior Lisa Tecca, Junior Angela Boykins, and Junior Cathy Brett were chosen for the All-OVC team and also received All-American nominations. Cindy Thomsen and Deb Winkler played very well, as did Margrith Semones, a freshman who earned a starting position by mid-season.

According to Coach Polvino, each of the players has her own story. "They all worked together for a successful season. They were close-knit like a family. They helped each other, settled each other, and took charge. The bench was outstanding under pressure. The team had a lot of confidence."

Making a strong comeback is Men's Cross Country

After being dropped as a sport in 1982 and being reinstated in 1983, cross country has made a major comeback. This year, with a new team and a new coach, the Colonels finished first in three of their five meets. The team placed fourth in the Ohio Valley Conference Championship. "With only two of the team's top five runners from last season's OVC Championship team returning, the Colonels lacked both depth and experience. However, the young team worked very well with Coach Bonk," according to Coach Rick Erdmann. Coach Bonk was a new addition to cross country this season who worked mainly with the men.

According to Coach Bonk, the team members all had a good attitude. Sophomore Orssie Bumpus, Freshman James Vandenberg, and Junior Steve Duffy were the mainstay of the team. They were the most consistent.

Coach Bonk is looking forward to next year. Everyone is returning and should improve as much as they want to work. "If the team members have the right attitude, next season will definitely be a success.

Winning their fourth straight OVC championship is Women's Cross Country

Coach Rick Erdmann, in his fourth year as head coach of the University Women's Cross Country Team, led the Colonels to their fourth straight Ohio Valley Conference Championship win.

The Colonels placed first in five of their eight meets — including the Queen City Invitational in which they competed against thirteen other teams. The University finished eighth in a field of 35 in the N.C.A.A. Region III Meet.

Many factors contributed to the success of this year's team. According to Coach Erdmann, "They had a very positive attitude. They also had pretty good work habits and became more competitive as the season progressed."

Three members of the team did especially well this season. Freshman Allison Kotouch had an outstanding season and earned an OVC individual championship. Pam Raglin, junior, also had an outstanding season as did senior Linda Davis who, as the captain of the team, "will definitely be missed next season."

Although the team will miss Davis' contribution next season, many talented runners will be returning and the future looks right for the Colonels.

Returning Alumni Celebrate Anniversary of Men's Swimming

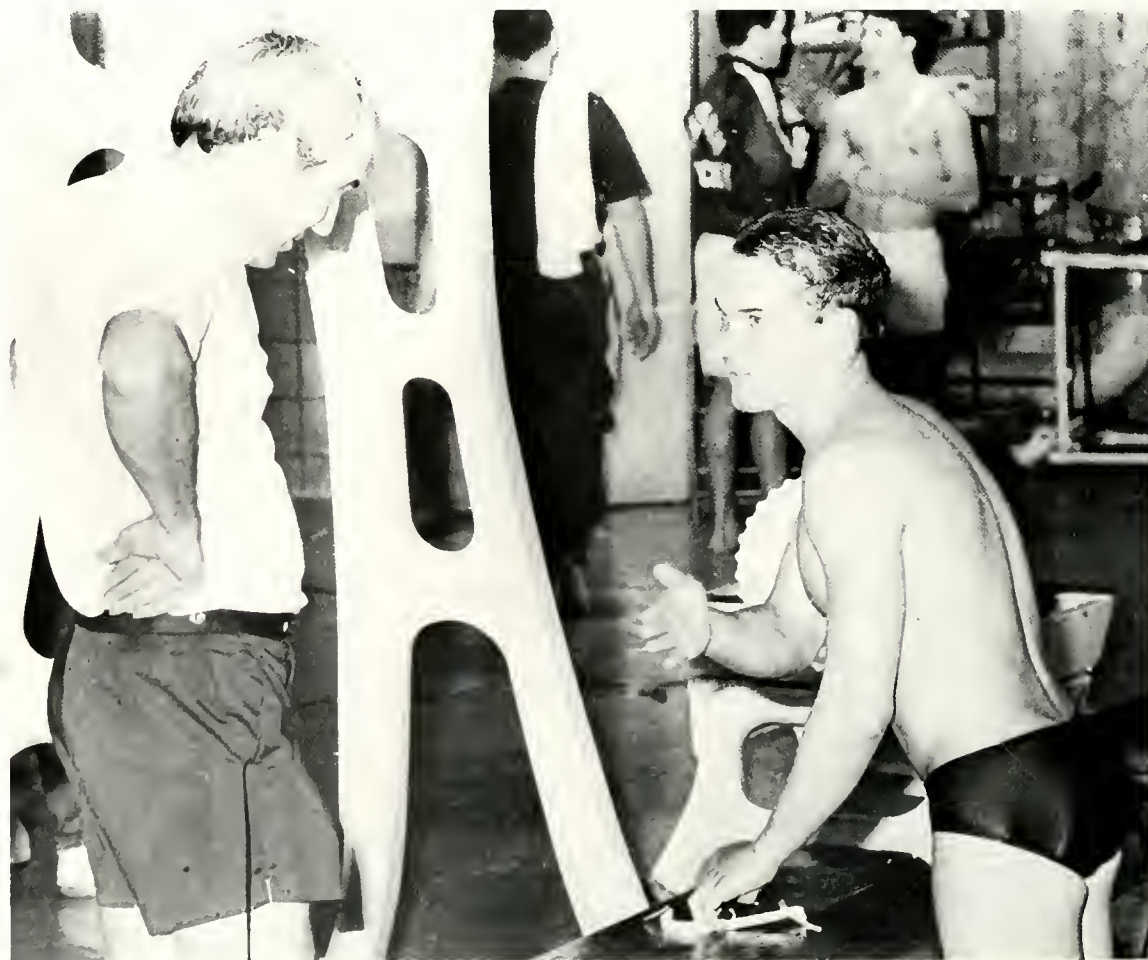

"Fifty Years of Swimming Excellence" was the motto of the Eels' program at the University during the 1985-86 season. The group celebrated the 50th anniversary of the first men's swim team at the University by holding an alumni reunion. It was attended by 40 swimmers, including three members of the original squad during the 1935-36 season. These men were Bob Dickman, Ed Hesser, and Paul Love.

Under the leadership of Coach Dan Lichty, the Eels continued the University's tradition of swimming excellence this season and finished the year in fifth place out of 10 teams in the Midwest Independent Championship. They also finished their dual meet season with a record of three wins and six losses. Co-Captains of the group were Senior Mike Strange and Junior Billy Reddick.

The Eels also set four new team records and a pool record. The following records were set: Senior Dave Mercer—50 yard freestyle; Strange—100 yard freestyle; Junior Mike Kirsch—100 yard and 200 yard breaststroke. The pool record was also set by Kirsch in the 100 yard breaststroke.

The Eels reached a landmark during the 1985-86 season and continued the tradition of excellence at the University.

Improvement Shown in Second Season of Women's Swimming

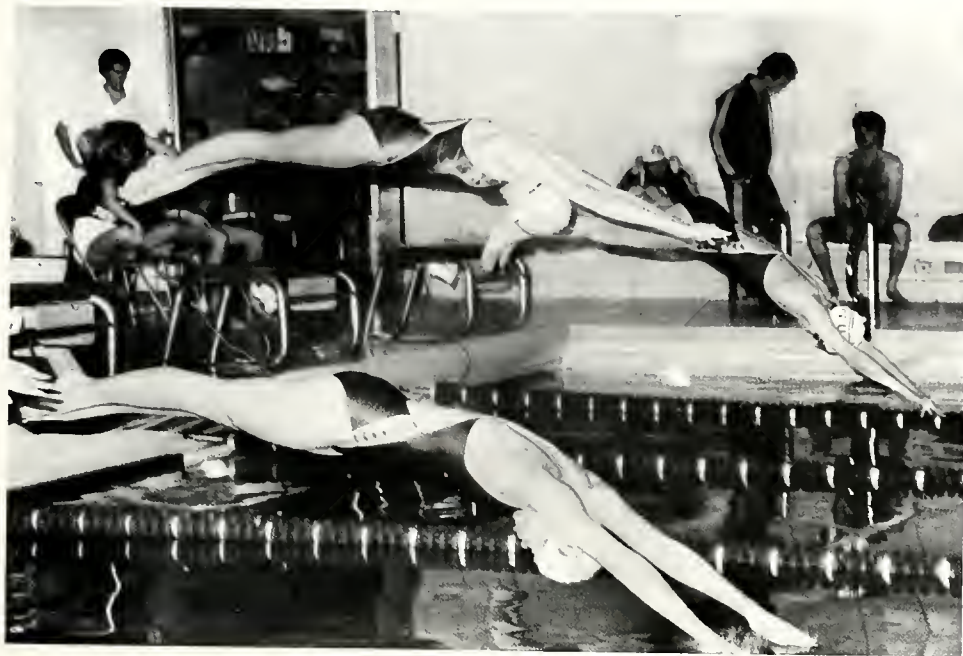

In their second year of competition, the Electrifying Eels improved their standing in the Midwest Independent Championship and also set 10 new school records.

Under the leadership of Coach Dan Lichty, the group trained by lifting weights three times a week and swimming twice daily. This paid off as their record was improved to sixth of 14 in the Midwest Independent Championships. Their dual meet record was three wins and three losses. The group was led by Captain Sophomore Linda Dagen.

The following school records have been established: Junior Jill Decker—200, 500, 1000, 1650 freestyle; Freshman Laura Stanley—100 fly, 100 backstroke; Freshman Ginny Ferguson—200 backstroke, 50 freestyle; Freshman B.J. Brannick—100 breaststroke; Junior Teri Terrell—100 freestyle; Stanley, Brannick, Sophomore Julie Cook, Terrell—200 medley relay; Freshman Terri Hicks, Decker, Freshman Janice Dagen, Terrell—800 freestyle relay; Ferguson, J. Dagen, Hicks, Terrell—200 freestyle relay; Ferguson, Brannick, Stanley, Terrell—400 medley relay; Ferguson, Hicks, Decker, Terrell—400 freestyle relay.

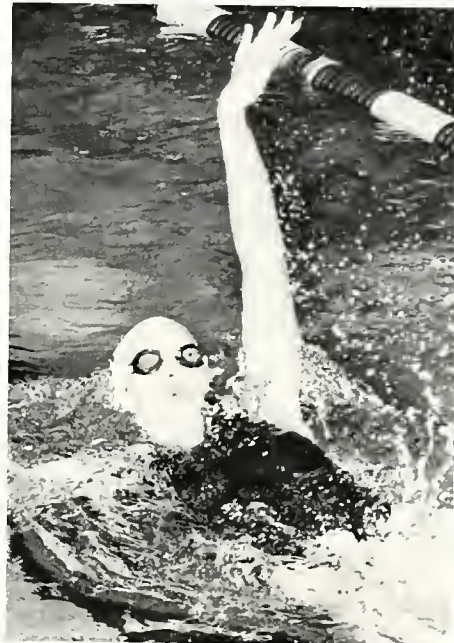

Improving their standing and establishing new records made the Electrifying Eels' second season at the University a successful one.

Pulling out a fourth place finish is Men's Tennis

The men's tennis team was lacking in experience but not in ability. Depth was a major problem since seven of the nine members of the team were freshmen.

The competition was stiff, but the Colonels finished their season with an 11-13 record. This record pulled a fourth place finish in the OVC. "We did about as well as I could expect," said Coach Higgins.

The overall performance of the team was good considering the inexperience. "We have a young team; we worked really hard, and the coach was happy with the way we played," said player Todd Carlisle.

The number one seed on the team for singles was Chris Smith who finished the season with an overall record of 14-15. The number one doubles team of Chris Brown and Scott Patrick ended with a 13-14 record.

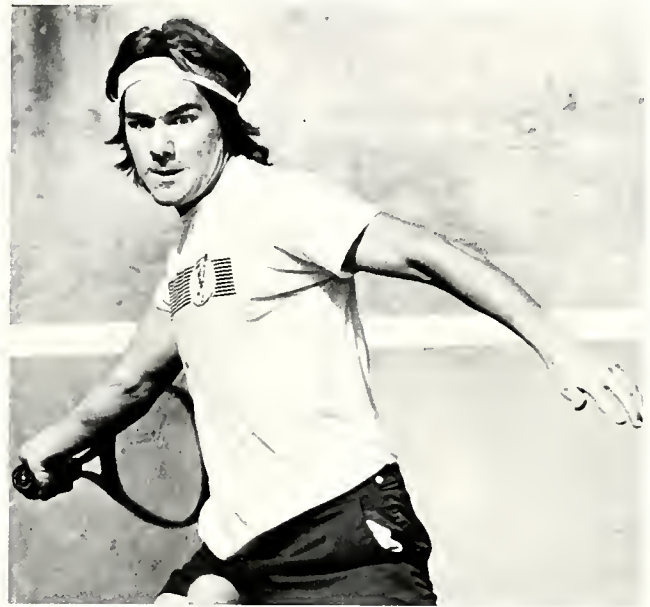

Chris Smith and Todd Hammonds, the number two doubles team placed second in the OVC.

Brian Markham, the number five singles seed placed third in the OVC.

The future of the team looks really good. With everyone returning and a more experienced team, the Colonels should be tough. "We've added a couple of good recruits," said Coach Higgins. "This will be a big factor in the performance of the Colonels team."

Improvement is the key for Women's Tennis

The women's tennis team was a "very young team and we didn't have much depth," said Coach Sandra Martin.

The Lady Colonels played well and solid in the top two positions, but "we had too much inconsistency from the latter positions." The top two seeds won the majority of the matches. However, these matches were not enough to win against a team under the nine point system, which consisted of six singles and three double matches.

The team encountered stiff competition, such as Ohio State, but they lost on the long points. "They played excellent matches with them, but in comparison to the scores, it wasn't that close," said Martin.

The Colonels ended their season with a 4-13 record which placed them in fifth place in the OVC. However, the top singles and double seeds placed as runners-up in the OVC. Kristi Spangenberg ended her season and college career with a 16-15 record in the top singles position. The team of Kristi Spangenberg and Claudia Porras teamed as the number one doubles seed and ended the season with a 22-12 record.

During the fall season at the state tournament held for all Division 1-A schools, Claudia Porras won her number two position. She defeated Lee McGuire from the University of Kentucky, a top twenty team.

Coach Martin knew her team was young, as did some of the players. "I was happy that we had the two seniors that won for us," said Traci Parella.

The team's overall attitude was encouraging since improvement could be seen by the players. "We should have set our goals higher," said Kim Carson.

Next year's team looks really good. "Returners should be back with consistency," said Martin. "We may surprise a few people with our depth."

A Rebuilding Year for the Golf Team

For the Colonels Golf team, the 84-85 year was a rebuilding one. The team, consisting of all freshman and sophomores, was experimental, using eleven different combinations of teams throughout the year. The result was a pleasing one — first place in the Ohio Valley Conference.

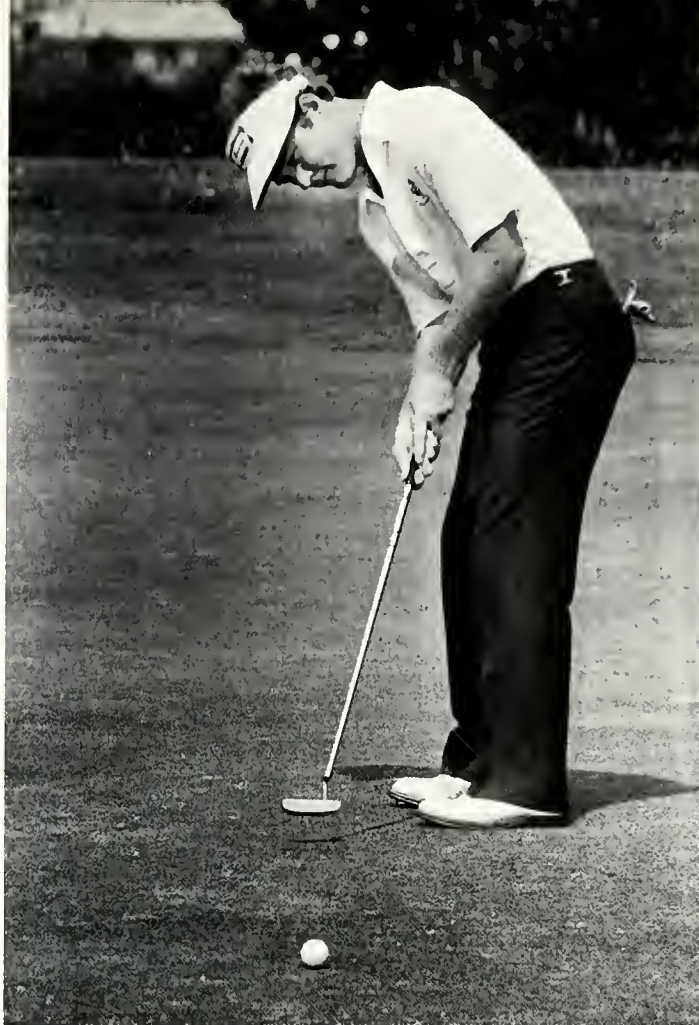

Two of the team's members were selected for the All-OVC team — Bruce Oldendick and Nick Montanaro. Oldendick was also named player of the year in the OVC.

Coach Smither looks to the 86 spring season with a positive attitude. He feels the team will be more competitive and will be able to compete with top teams. He also believes they should be strong contenders for national ranking and with their schedule of games and competitions, among the nation's best.

Defending their OVC title for the second year is Baseball

Thompson

The 1984 spring season brought many new school records and extreme success for the Colonels. Head Coach Jim Ward said he felt "very good about the season."

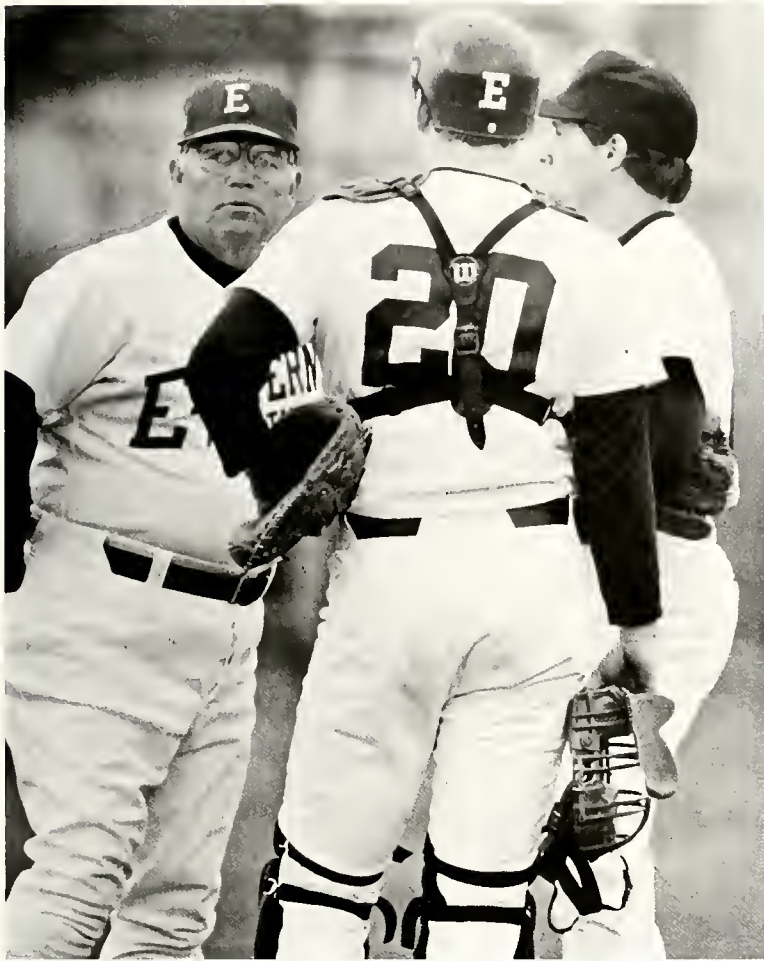

After compiling a record of 42-26, the Colonels went on to successfully defend their title as OVC tournament champion. The colonels also represented the OVC in the NCAA tournament for the second year in a row. According to Coach Ward, the Colonels were the only team competing in the NCAA tournament that had "hit more than 100 home runs and stolen more than 200 bases."

Nationally, the team ranked extremely well. The ESPN Collegiate Baseball Division I Poll ranked the Colonels 27th in the country in its final rankings.

Robert Moore was tied for second in the nation with 26 doubles and Scott Fromwiller was tenth in the nation with 49 stolen bases. The team, as a whole, was ranked sixth, with 113 homeruns; fifth, with 209 stolen bases; and seventh, with a .572 slugging percentage.

Many school records were also broken. Clay Elswick hit 15 homeruns this season, bringing his career total to 32 and setting a school record. Elswick also drove in 63 runs which brought his career total to 118 and a new school record. Scott Fromwiller's 49 stolen bases set a school record as well as a new OVC record. Ed Norkus pitched his way to nine victories, which tied a school record. The team's 42 victories also set a new school record.

Capturing the OVC title for a second year Men's Track

The return of the fourteen lettermen from the OVC championship team was definitely a factor in the Colonels' success this season.

After winning the OVC Indoor Track Championship last year for the first time, the Colonels came back to almost win it again. The Colonels' placed second in the OVC championship.

Besides finishing second in the OVC, the team also made a strong showing at the Penn Relays. The Colonels made it to the finals in both the 4×100 and the 4×200 relays.

Head Coach Rick Erdmann said that the sprint relays "ran relatively well" throughout the season. He said Kevin Johnson, Vince Scott, Stan Pringle, and Jerome Dorsey were very competitive.

Although many members contributed to the success of the team, the accomplishments of senior Larry White were especially outstanding. White increased his personal best in the long jump from 24'10" to 25'3" and triple-jumped 50'.

Overall, the season was a successful one for the Colonels..

A Strong Returning Nucleus for Women's Track

With a "strong returning nucleus" and many outstanding freshmen, the Colonels had a successful season. The team overcame a challenging schedule and performed well.

For the third year in a row the Colonels placed first in the Becky Boone Relays. The team also won the OVC Indoor and Outdoor Championships.

Although every member of the team contributed to its success, a few people made special contributions.

Rose Gilmore, a senior, was named an All-American in the NCAA.

Head Coach Rick Erdmann said Freshman Jackie Humphrey and Freshman Angie Barker also had outstanding seasons.

Sophomore Pam Raglin was a "leader in distance" and was chosen as an outstanding athlete in track in the OVC.

Overall, the Colonels finished in first place in 5 out of six scored meets and came in second in the sixth meet. Winning the OVC Outdoor Championship merely capped off an outstanding season.

The "Commitment to Excellence"

The "Commitment to Excellence" was the main topic of discussion on Saturday, May 11, 1985, as Dr. Hanly Funderburk became the University's eighth president.

"If we have a role to play in higher education in the commonwealth it must be one of true excellence, not one of somebody else's idea of acceptable mediocrity," said Funderburk in his address at the joint inauguration/commencement program at Hanger Field at the University.

Funderburk said he hopes to obtain excellence at the University through four elements, which he claimed are involved in any search for excellence.

"First, I believe that no person and no institution can strive for excellence and be easily satisfied by the commonplace," he said.

Funderburk also said, that excellence embodied the realization that bigger is not necessarily better and that "the achievement of excellence requires pain and hard work."

As his fourth and final point, he said, "I am firmly convinced that excellence for an institution requires that we attract the most talented and the most committed people we can find to this campus."

The oath of office was administered by Robert F. Stephens, chief justice of the Kentucky Supreme Court. Funderburk had earlier assumed his duties as president of Jan. 1, 1985.

"I hope we'll be successful in our venture for this 'commitment to excellence' at the University," said Funderburk. "It's a vital part of what we tend to accomplish here."

Facing Challenges of New Goals

"Eastern is a very well run institution and has a good reputation throughout the state, region and nation," said Pres. Hanly Funderburk. "Therefore, my overall goal is simply to make a good university a better one."

Funderburk realized he had to confront several challenges in order to reach this goal. Since taking office on Jan. 1, 1985, he has done several things to work toward facing their challenges.

These challenges include maintaining and retaining a quality faculty, providing sound management techniques to get the most from every state-appropriated dollar, seeking additional sources of funding from both state government and the private sector, encouraging active involvement of alumni and other friends and recruiting and retaining quality students.

He has developed several new programs to improve the University's financial status as well as its role in the community.

One of these programs is the University Legislative Network, which is a group of alumni and friends throughout the state who help with legislation important to the institution.

"We are also laying the basis and foundation for the Development Program," said Funderburk. "This is a way to get private support by inviting people to the campus for functions, such as football and basketball games. We want to make these people more aware of the University's programs." He is also working with the staff on several programs which will help make the people of Kentucky more aware of the availability of programs offered at the University.

"We serve a 22-county region and I want to take more of our programs off-campus and move into more areas of the state," said Funderburk.

Funderburk claims some of his greatest accomplishments have been in the area of communications. He has tried to establish dialogue with various constituents of the University, particularly the students.

I enjoy working with and meeting the students," said Funderburk. "I think the students' attitudes now are more like they were in the mid 1950's. This is a very good time in terms of how students feel about life."

Other accomplishments noted by Funderburk are his ability to delegate authority to staff members and the improvements in the maintenance at the University.

"I've really enjoyed being a part of Eastern," said Funderburk. "I have attended many enjoyable events; it's been a really pleasant venture for me."

The Scenario: “Childhood Sweethearts”

The scenario of the “childhood sweethearts” who marry and live happily ever after was the basic storyline for the two residents of Carrolton, Alabama, who married thirty-two years ago.

Hanly and Helen Hanson Funderburk grew up in the small Alabama community together. They started dating in junior high and their relationship continued through high school and beyond to Auburn University. They were married in 1953, after Dr. Funderburk graduated. Starting a family a few years later, the Funderburks became the parents of a son and a daughter.

The life as a first lady at the University is one that Helen Funderburk truly enjoys. She feels the role as first lady is an important one. She is a multi-faceted woman: a wife, a mother, a grandmother and a confidant. She is at her husband's side in many ways. "If there is a problem, well, we'll talk it over and I'll tell him how I feel about the situation, but I never know the outcome until it's over. We trust each other's opinions, just like any couple that's been married for thirty-two years."

A large portion of Mrs. Funderburk's time is spent planning and preparing to entertain. The president's home, Blanton House, is the sight of many weekend gatherings. "Hanly and I just love football season. We entertain out-of-town guests and alumni during the season."

Finding time for hobbies outside of University life is difficult for Mrs. Funderburk. Needlework is her greatest interest. She also enjoys counted-cross stitching and smocking for her granddaughter.

However, she tries not to get involved in outside activities because there isn't time. "The President and I spend approximately four nights out a week, attending various University functions and don't have time for many other activities, because we do thoroughly enjoy university life. It offers so much. I guess that I would say it is the activities with the students that I enjoy the most. They are more fun than anything else we do."

President Emeritus Dr. Robert R. Martin

President Emeritus Robert R. Martin announced that he will not seek another term in the Kentucky Senate, which he has served on since 1976. Martin served as President of Eastern Kentucky University for 16 years.

While in the Senate he served on the Education Committee, and the Sub-Committee on Higher Education. The Welfare Committee also receives his attention.

Prior to that he had served the Commonwealth as Superintendent of Public Institution and Secretary of Finance.

He was an outspoken advocate of higher education.

President Emeritus Dr. J. C. Powell

President Emeritus J.C. Powell was named to the University of Kentucky's Hall of Distinguished Alumni. Powell is one of only 177 graduates who have been designated as a distinguished alumni.

Powell, who received both his bachelor's and doctor of education degrees from the University of Kentucky, said, "I'm especially pleased to be numbered among such a distinguished — and small — group of men and women."

Since Powell's retirement in December 1984, he has also been named as an honorary alumnus of the University.

In his first year of retirement, Powell traveled to Europe with his wife, Downey, as a result of a gift from alumni and friends.

Powell served as the University's seventh president since 1976, which he strived for the "quest of quality" in the University's academic program.

Board of Regents

The Board of Regents is the official policy-making and statutory governing body of the University. The Board approved coed housing in Martin Hall and allowed microwave ovens and various other appliances in the residence halls.

Each year a student representative is elected to serve on this governing board. Ken Kearns served the students by attending quarterly meetings and speaking on issues facing the Board.

The student regent's responsibilities vary from year to year. Representing the University, Kearns spoke at the Council for Higher Education in June at the University and attended the Rally for Higher Education in Frankfort.

Kearns said, "As a student regent, I bring in the students' perspectives of various issues that come before the Board."

Schwendeman Named Vice President

Dr. Joseph R. Schwendeman, formerly Associate Vice President for Academic Planning and Development, was named Vice President of Administrative Affairs by President Funderburk. Schwendeman replaces Dr. William Sexton who retired. Included in Schwendeman's responsibilities will be special programs, the planetarium, administrative computing, academic computing, radio and television, natural areas and physical plant. Schwendeman said his goal was to "supply quality service in an economical manner. Dr. Sexton left a sound organization on which to build, with a group of capable and cooperative directors."

The quality of student life to a large extent is the responsibility of the divisions under the direction of the Vice President for Student Affairs headed by Dr. Thomas Meyers.

The Office of the Vice President of Academic Affairs is a very real part of the life of the student from the time of registration until graduation and transcripts used after graduation. This office is headed by Dr. John Rowlett.

Donald R. Feltner, Vice President of University Relations and Development, directs the divisions of development, alumni affairs, etc, which combine efforts to raise both "friends" and "funds" for the University.

Earl Baldwin, Vice President of Business, is responsible for the financial stability of the University by managing such areas as purchasing and store, accounts receivable and the auxiliary enterprises.

Miss Michelle L. Smith, an Accounting major from the College of Business, has been awarded the 1986 Hall of Fame Award.

With a G.P.A. of 3.955, Michelle had quite an intense major. "I found accounting challenging, and I guess that's what drew me to it," said Smith.

However, she found time for many outside activities. She was a member and held offices in the Alpha Delta Pi sorority.

"The sorority was very helpful to me. It taught me to structure my time well," Smith says.

Michelle was involved in other student organizations, such as Mortar Board, Sigma Tau Pi, United Methodist Campus Center, and Gamma Beta Phi.

When asked about offering advice to other students Smith replied "Do your best — don't go overboard in just one area; academics aren't the only thing to be learned here at Eastern. Students tend to forget that. Get involved in the entire college scene." Smith is proof that excellent grades and college activities can be held together.

The Hall of Fame Award was chosen from a group of outstanding students — one student from each of the seven colleges at the University. The final recipient was then chosen by President Hanly Funderburk.

Mortar Board sponsors Michelle as a Homecoming Queen candidate. Smith was one of fifteen finalists.

David Gale has been the Dean of the College of Allied Health and Nursing for thirteen years. He feels that improvement of his college lies in a continuance of the same things they are doing now.

A list of the college goals included such points as: 1) to provide high quality programs at the undergraduate and graduate levels for individuals who wish to pursue a health profession, 2) to provide for career mobility and continuing education within various health professions, 3) to provide career guidance that will attract students of high quality who will find a rewarding career in the health care field, and 4) to ensure that the admission process supports the non-discrimination policy.

A highly qualified faculty is a strong point of this college. When asked what he enjoys most about Eastern, Gale said, "It's the fine university with excellent resources."

College of Allied Health and Nursing

The outstanding student of the College of Allied Health and Nursing is Debra Rose, who is a senior nursing major.

Rose has participated in several organizations and activities in her field of study. She served as chairperson of the Ways and Means Committee in the Baccalaureate Student Nurses Association. She was also an American Red Cross Blood Mobile volunteer and a ward clerk and nursing assistant at the Clark County Hospital.

Honors Rose received were Lambda Sigma Sophomore Honor Society, Eastern Kentucky

University Nursing Honor Society, Mortar Board Senior Honor Society and Who's Who Among American Colleges and Universities.

Kenneth Hanson, Dean of the College of Applied Arts and Technology, has filled this position since 1975. He feels that improvement of the college lies in continuation of the same day-to-day, hands-on-experience and fine tuning the skills students will need to get a good job. He added that more students would also be an improvement to the program as there are many excellent job opportunities in this field.

Some of the strong points of the college are that the college provides a broad technical or professional education so graduates can expand in their field. He also said that his college gives students excellent experience which enables them to find good jobs.

One of the things Hanson likes most about the University is the relationship of students with faculty. He also added that he felt the students at the University are very goal-oriented.

Hanson grew up in Sweden. He served in the Air Force in both Sweden and the United States. He did his undergraduate work at the University of Southern Illinois and received his Masters and Ph.D from the University of Missouri. Hanson came to the University in 1966.

College of Applied Arts and Technology

The outstanding student of the College of Applied Arts and Technology was Laura Winebrenner, senior Technical Horticulture major.

Honors she has received while at the University include the Dean's List for five semesters, Honors award from Phi Kappa Phi Honor Society, Presidential Scholarship, Kentucky State Florist Association Scholarship and the National Jane R. Layman Scholarship.

Winebrenner was also a member of the ECU Horticulture Club; Allied Landscape Institute, Bedding Plants, Inc., and the Explorers Club.

After completing his undergraduate work at Furman University in Greenville, South Carolina, Dean John Long received his Master of Arts degree from Northeastern University in Boston and his Ph.D from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Long has been the Dean of the College of Arts and Humanities at the University since 1979.

Long feels that re-examining the existing program and improving the curriculum would be an improvement in his college. He added: "Improvement is a continuing effort."

One of the goals for the College of Arts and Humanities this year was to establish "Friends of the Fine Arts." Long feels that increased public knowledge and participation in the performances at the University are important.

According to Long, the faculty of his college is its strongest point. The faculty is very well-prepared and comes from a wide variety of backgrounds, he said. He added that having good facilities is an important plus, also. When asked what he enjoyed most about the University, Long said he thought it was a good size. "Eastern is large enough to have advantages the smaller schools don't have, but not so big that people get lost from one another."

College of Arts and Humanities

Johanna Smith, senior Music major, was chosen as the outstanding student of the College of Arts and Humanities.

Smith received the Hall of Fame Award, Dean's Award, was on the Dean's List each semester and received a music scholarship.

She was extremely involved in the music field and was a member of the University Singers, Madrigal Singers and director of the Baptist Student Union Choir.

Smith has performed as a vocalist at numerous places and plans to continue professional work as a performer.

"I enjoy the people I work with and the support they have given me," said Alfred Patrick, Dean of the College of Business. "I also enjoy the campus atmosphere, the beauty of the campus and the area, the location, and the challenges."

Patrick has been dean of the College for two years. He has been at the University since 1965 and served as chairman of Department of Business Education and Office Administration from 1966 to 1983. He was a professor in 1983 and 84; chairman in 1984-85; and then he became acting dean.

As dean he has set several goals for the college — completion of microcomputer lab, faculty review of some programs and services (MBA and Central Advising Office), and the development of college guidelines for merit pay for faculty.

He also noted the college's strongest points: excellent faculty, sound curriculums, respected by employers, wide variety of majors available, Central Advising Office, and good facilities.

Patrick received his Bachelor's and Master's degrees from Virginia Tech and his doctorate from the University of Tennessee.

College of Business

Senior Michelle Smith was chosen as the outstanding student in the College of Business. Smith, an accounting major, graduated Summa Cum Laude in December with a GPA of 3.955.

She was on the Dean's List every semester and received a Dean's award. While maintaining her high GPA, Smith was also President of Mortar Board and a member of Alpha Delta Pi. She participated in Intramural sports and was chosen as a Homecoming Queen Candidate.

"I belong in a museum; I think," said Dr. Dixon Barr, who has been Dean of the College of Education for 21 years. "That's a long time, but I wouldn't have been here all this time if I didn't like the University."

Barr likes all aspects of the University—the friendly people, the exciting atmosphere, and the gorgeous campus. "I have a great love for this place."

Barr came here after receiving his Bachelors degree from Ball State University in Indiana, and his Masters and Doctorate from Columbia University in New York City.

He works to improve his college each year. His major goals this year were computer literacy for all students becoming teachers and better faculty development.

"I think we have a strong dedicated faculty," Barr said. "That's the best thing about our college, along with the fact that we have Model Laboratory School. That is a vital part of our education program because it gives students the chance to work with kids from the start."

College of Education

The outstanding student of the College of Education was Susan Martin, senior Elementary Education and Kindergarten major.

Awards received by Martin at the University were Who's Who among students of American Colleges and Universities, Dean's List, and the Florence B. Stratemeyer Award.

She was involved in several organizations dealing with her major. She was an officer in Kappa Delta Pi Education Honor Society and served as a student representative on the College of Education Curriculum Coordinating Committee. She also participated in Mortar Board and the ECU Christian Student fellowship.

After being Dean of the College of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics for seven years, Dean Russell Bogue said, on the subject of improvement, "I think we're pretty well on target." He said they have revised the curriculum to meet the needs of the students. The goals this year were, as for every year, to meet those needs by changing the curriculum and to have better advising to meet changing times so when a student enters the University, they have a good opportunity to be employed.

Bogue feels that one of the strongest points of his college is the faculty. "We have a lot of people who are well-educated and they have a strong interest in helping students." He added that he enjoys working at the University because the friendliness of faculty and students make it a fine University.

Bogue did his undergraduate work at Kearney State in Nebraska. He received his Masters from the University of Nebraska and his Doctorate from Wyoming University. He has three sons and enjoys the outdoors.

College of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics

The outstanding student of the College of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics is Allan Horner, a senior Physical Education major.

To receive practical experience in his major, he has worked with the Nashville Sounds Baseball team three summers, and he is a student member of the University Athletics Committee.

He was chosen as the Outstanding Junior in Physical Education in 1985 and he was also awarded the Hood Hughes, Presnell Scholarship Award the same year.

Horner is also a member of Kappa Alpha order Fraternity and the Student Association at the University.

Truett Ricks, Dean of the College of Law Enforcement, centered his college's goals for the coming years mainly on recruitment of students. He would like to expand recruiting in Ohio, Tennessee, and Kentucky, and he would also like to have graduates assist in representing the University in high school career days in their hometowns. He would also like to formalize relationships with community colleges so that they can assist in recruiting. As far as Ricks' goals in teaching, he would like to assist the faculty in obtaining resources so that they can be more involved in research and service. Ricks feels that the college has been a success so far mainly because the programs meet the needs of the students in the field and the faculty. He believes that the colleges' good reputation comes from the quality of the faculty and the success of graduates after they go into the field.

His spare time, when not at home with his family, is spent doing outside consulting work and attending Eastern football games.

He is originally from Bolivar, Louisiana, and he was employed by the University in January 1972 and he became Dean-Professor of Police Administration in June 1983. Today Ricks is working hard to make the College of Law Enforcement the best for those interested in the field.

College of Law Enforcement

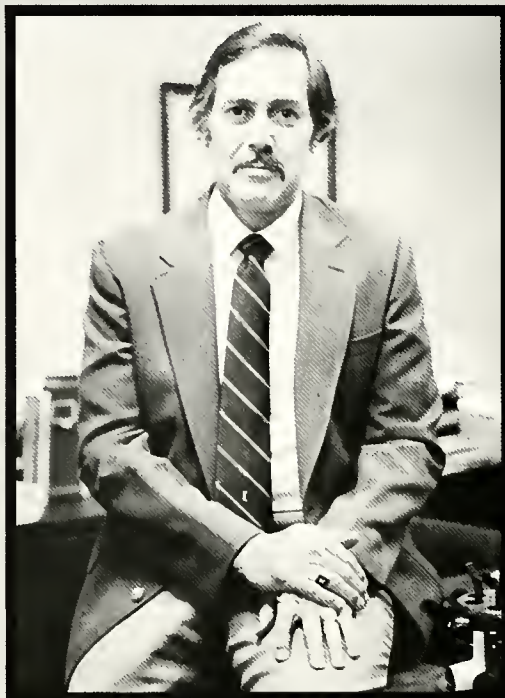

The outstanding student in the College of Law Enforcement was senior Catherine Moore. She received a double major in Psychology and Corrections.

Moore was a member of Psi Chi, an honorary society for Psychology majors, and she was nominated for Who's Who among students in American Universities and College and for Outstanding College Woman.

Moore was also involved in the Greek program at the University. She was president of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority and served on the Greek Week and Greek Leadership Committees.

Since his wife, Betty, teaches science in a Madison County middle school, the sciences seem to be a major interest in the family of Donald Batch, Dean of the College of Natural and Mathematical Sciences. Originally from Springfield, Illinois, Batch has filled the position of Dean since 1979.

He feels getting more financial support would be an improvement in the College because this would allow higher faculty salaries and development, as well as better equipment. Batch said their goals for the year included maintaining the current academic courses and programs and the current academic advising courses.

The three strongest points of the College are, according to the Dean, having the best academically prepared students at the University, a highly qualified and dedicated faculty and good courses and program offerings.

When asked what he enjoys about Eastern, Batch responded by saying, "my association with students and the faculty." He added that he also enjoys inter- and intra-personal relationships in the academic community.

Batch attended Illinois College where he received his B.S. and Masters. He received his Ph.D from the University of Illinois and came to the University in 1965.

College of Natural and Mathematical Sciences

Donna Lambers, senior Biology major, was selected as the outstanding student of the College of Natural and Mathematical Sciences.

She received several honors at the University including Outstanding Freshman in Biology, Outstanding sophomore in Chemistry, Dean's List, Dean's Award, and Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges.

She was vice-president of Student Association and Senate and served on the Parish council of the Catholic Newman Center.

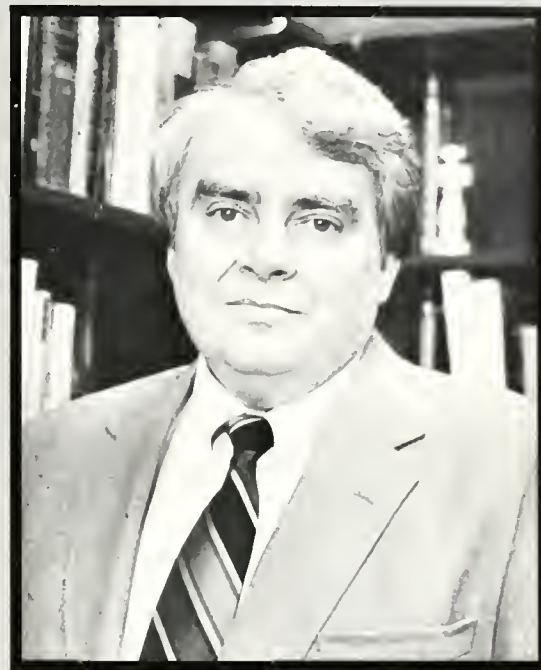

Originally from El Paso, Texas, and reared in Los Crusus, New Mexico, Russell Enzie has been the Dean of the College of Social and Behavioral Sciences for seven years. He and his wife, Nancy, have a daughter named Julie, who is a graduate student at Morehead.

According to Enzie, the goals for his college this year were: 1) to provide the highest quality instruction possible to the students, 2) to provide high quality programs for general education and specialized courses, and 3) to improve teaching effectiveness and advising system.

Enzie feels the dedicated and highly qualified faculty is a major strong point of his college. He added that working with the people is one of the things he enjoys most about working at the University.

College of Social and Behavioral Sciences

Kimberly Goodman, a senior psychology major, was chosen as the outstanding student of the College of Social and Behavioral Sciences.

Goodman was a member of several honor societies at the University including Phi Theta Kappa Honor Society, Psi Chi Honor Society and Mortar Board. She was also in Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities.

She was a member of the Kappa Delta Sorority and received the Kappa Delta Academic Award in the fall of 1985.

Colleges: Diverse Yet Unified

The University as one unit is composed of several parts that together make it into a strong and undivided university. The nine different colleges work separately, but together, to create an appropriate curriculum for the students and an enjoyable environment for both the faculty and students.

The College of Allied Health and Nursing offers educational opportunities in a variety of disciplines which are concerned with the maintenance and promotion of health. The students are required to take courses in the biological, social, and physical sciences.

The College offers Bachelor of Science degrees in environmental health science, health record administration, medical technology, nursing, and occupational therapy.

The College of Applied Arts and Technology offers a variety of degrees in four departments: Agriculture, Home Economics, Industrial Education and Technology, and Mass Communications. The Department of Military Science is also included in this College.

The College offers a large number of extended campus classes and encourages its faculty to provide consultative services for the public good. The College is also engaged in special projects and provides services for the public in applied arts and technologies.

The purpose of the College of Arts and Humanities is to provide for all students the artistic and humanistic elements of a liberal education. It provides students with courses to help them gain an understanding of what it means to be human and the skills to express that understanding.

The College offers the following degrees: Bachelor of Arts, Fine Arts, Music, Music Education, and Individualized Studies. The Bachelor of Arts is granted to students who major in art, English, French, German, Ibero-American Studies, music, philosophy, religion, Russian, Spanish, speech, speech and theatre arts, speech communication and human relations, and theatre arts. Students in art and performing arts may work towards the Bachelor of Fine Arts degree.

The programs in the College of Business are designed to provide professional education for careers in business. The Bachelor of Business Administration is offerred in the areas of accounting, coal mining administration, insurance, management, marketing, office administration, real estate, and transportation and physical distribution.

The preparation of teachers has been a strong priority at the University since it was founded and the College of Education continues to be a strong and committed part of the University. Teacher education is viewed as an all-university function, but the programs of elementary education, library science, rehabilitation education, special education, and communication disorders are located and advised in the College of Education. Secondary teaching programs are located in their respective colleges.

The College of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics prepares professionals in the areas of leisure, recreation alternatives, fitness and healthful living, which are major concerns in today's society. The College gives emphasis to the human factors involved in movement, mental and physical well-being, leisure, and skilled motor performance.

The College offers Bachelor degrees in health education, physical education, and recreation and park administration.

The College of Law Enforcement was founded to fulfill the threefold purpose of the University—teaching, service, and research. The College is composed of the Department of Correctional Services, the Department of Fire Prevention and Control, the Department of Police Administration, the Department of Security, and the Traffic Safety Institute.

The College offers baccalaureate degrees in corrections, fire prevention and control, forensic science, police administration, and security.

The College of Natural and Mathematical Sciences offers the Bachelor of Arts to students who major in chemistry and geology, the Bachelor of Science to students who major in biology, chemistry, computer science, earth science, environmental resources, fisheries management, geology, mathematics, microbiology, physics, statistics, and wildlife management. They also offer the Bachelor of Individualized Studies.

The College of Social and Behavioral Sciences is concerned with mankind's social, political, economic, and physiological development. Their focus is on the various peoples of the world and their histories, cultures, physical environments, and problems.

The College consists of six academic departments: Geography and Planning, History, Political Science, Psychology, Social Science, and Anthropology, Sociology and Social Work.

The University offers a wide variety of programs which are recognized throughout the state. The nine colleges which comprise the University set individual goals to work for the betterment of their college and the University as a whole.

This is a story of an investment—an investment of time, talent and energy. Like in any other investment, a return is expected.

For Dr. Charles Sweet and Dr. Harold Blythe, professors of English at the University, the gain on their investment is profitable.

Doctors Sweet and Blythe are writers—writers of mystery. They have been ghost writers for three years, writing under an assumed name.

The two started by playing doubles tennis together. After writing education tapes together, they decided to combine their talents and write a book. This first book took nine months to complete and is now being read by a publishing company.

The ideas for their stories come from the many books they have read and from the conversations that have taken place over coffee and doughnuts at a local McDonalds. The two have met for long lunch breaks so often that their special reserved booth has been dedicated to them. A picture of the two men and a plaque hang over the booth.

The two often become so absorbed in their work that they forget their surroundings. "Sometimes we get on a roll and my wife will be talking to me; I never hear a word she says," Sweet said.

There are many reasons why the men write these books. Writing has become a hobby for them. "It's something I just like doing," Sweet said. They do it for fun and also as a source of supplemental income. "We've been earning such an income that we have to get H&R Block to fill out our taxes," said Sweet.

The two men are not limited to their teaching professions. Their investment of time and energy has produced one novel and hopefully more successful ventures in the future.

Making Friends and Helping Others

The Mentor Program provides a chance for incoming students to take advantage of opportunities available to them at the University.

Mentor, an organization run by students, was started in the fall of 1984 and has grown considerably since then.

"This year we have 77 mentors and about 200 freshmen involved in the program," said Joe Kappes, director of the program. "Next year we want to work more on recruitment by providing information about the program during summer orientation," he said.

"Our main purpose is to welcome the freshmen to campus and help them to get involved with activities before boredom and apathy set in," said Kappes.

"The organization gives the new student group support and personal attention when he needs it most. Since the program is optional, the mentor can provide as much or as little help as the new student needs," said Teressa Renner, a mentor.

The groups, made up of one veteran student and two or three freshmen, are matched up according to similar interests. The veteran student does not act as an authoritative figure, but rather as a resource and friend.

Even when a mentor may not be able to help you directly, he can introduce you to someone who can.

Academic help, financial help, professional counseling, social opportunities, job availability and health care are all services that Mentor can help with.

But, perhaps most importantly, a mentor can be a friend when things get rough.

From grammar school on, the message has always been clear: in the world of academics, it pays to get A's. In today's competitive world, a high grade point average has become increasingly important in helping a college graduate land a good job.

"Grades are not the only thing that an employer looks for when hiring someone, but good grades will often help you get your foot in the door to get an interview," said Dr. Bertee Adkins, Associate Professor of Business Education and Office Administration.

However, a high GPA doesn't always ensure a person the job. "It will get you the interview, but then you have to prove yourself," said Adkins. "You have to show the company that there is something special about you, and you have something unique to offer the company."

Another important factor for the graduate is proving that he has human skills to the employer. "Just because you have a 4.0 doesn't mean you can relate well to the public," said Adkins. "You have to show them you've learned something about life while maintaining a high GPA."

A study published in the Journal of College Placement (JCP) in 1981 showed that recruiters valued a person's communication skills, clarity of career goals, confidence and assertiveness a great deal more than grades when it came to making a final hiring decision.

On the other hand, just because a person has bad grades doesn't mean he won't be able to get a good job. The main problem is getting the company to grant him an interview because research has shown that nine times out of ten, grades still determine whether a person is given a first interview with a company.

Students Benefit From Successful Upgrading

Once a person with bad grades is given an interview, he has the chance to prove himself. "A lot of times students with bad grades have the ability to apply what they have learned better than someone with good grades," said Adkins.

Another way to downplay bad grades is by gaining experience in jobs dealing with their field of study. Some job markets, such as broadcasting, journalism and public relations, stress experience as a main factor in being considered for a job. Other fields are less influenced by experience. "Some companies want you to have established a good basis on which to learn what they want to teach you. They prefer that you have no experience in case you have learned to do things the wrong way. Then they can train you their way," said Atkins.

Another way of downplaying bad grades is to have a breakdown of the GPA into separate semesters. Then if the student had a bad freshman year and improved over the next three years, the employer could see that the student had a "change of heart or goals," according to Adkins. A smart employer probes the grades and determines if progress was made over each semester, or if the student had to work 40 or 50 hours a week to pay for school. These factors might affect the employer's decision.

Some students don't understand the significance of obtaining a high GPA. "I think the freshmen should be counseled about how important it is to get good grades," said Adkins. "They have to realize that the reason they're in school is to prepare themselves for a career."

Adkins believes that the most important quality a student can possess to enable him to get a good GPA and a good job is a positive attitude and the willingness to work. "I think if a student possesses these virtues, then everything else will fall into place."

The interview has become the most important factor in the job search, so much emphasis has been placed on helping students at the University prepare themselves for it.

"It's very important that when you go in for an interview and make a first impression, that it's a good one," said Laura Melius, placement coordinator at the Career Development and Placement Center at the University.

The job market has become so competitive that the employers have begun to place more emphasis on the interview. Very few employees will hire a person sight unseen because they are looking for the whole individual, not just someone who has the knowledge.

Melius and other members of CD&P give students advice while explaining the interviewing process to them. "The most important thing is to make sure you're well prepared before going to the interview," said Melius. "This includes knowing yourself and what skills you have to offer the organization and also knowing the organization."

Right: Senior Jimmy Woods prepares for job searching while receiving assistance from C.D.&P.

Career Development and Placement Center Helps Students Prepare For Their Job Search

Another necessity is to have concrete examples of your skills. "It's not enough to say you're organized," said Melius. "You have to be able to tell them the clubs you were in and the jobs you held while working to receive your degree."

Another important requirement of an interview is to present yourself professionally. In a list of reasons employers gave for rejecting applicants during the interview, the number one reason was poor personal appearance. This is stressed in CD&P's interview seminars. They note the importance of maintaining a conservative appearance in one's actions, hairstyles, jewelry, and clothing. (cont.)

Other top reasons for rejection include nervousness, the failure to look the interviewer in the eye, and a limp, fishy handshake.

The advice the directors of CD&P give are beneficial to the students at the University. "She gave me an idea of what to expect in an interview and I learned how to better prepare myself," said Lori Coleman, senior sociology major from Frankfort.

"I didn't know there was so much involved in an interview," said Rebecca Smith, sophomore interior design major from South Shore. "Now I know you have to be careful about everything from the length of your skirt to the way you shake the employer's hand."

So, learning to prepare oneself for an interview is important and could be a deciding factor in helping one get a job.

Along with the emergence of the goal-oriented student at the University has come the increasing number of professional organizations to help students learn more about their areas of study.

"I think the idea behind these clubs is awareness," said senior Brenda Peter, member of the Textiles, Clothing and Fashion Club. "Students want to find out what their degree will enable them to do, and they want to meet people who work in the field."

Organizations Heighten Career Awareness

The various professional groups on campus give students these opportunities by providing field trips, seminars, speakers, newsletters, and chances for actual participation.

The Accounting Club helps its students in many ways, according to Pres. Shauna VanPelt. The group visited accounting firms in Louisville and Cincinnati, and they also had presentations at their meetings from CPA's. Perhaps the most beneficial activity for them is the VITA (Voluntary Income Tax Assistance) program. "This is where we help the lower income people fill out their taxes," said Van Pelt. "This is beneficial to the students and the community."

Another group which allows the students to have hands-on experience with their field of duty is the Public Relations Student Society of America (PRSSA). "We have a program entitled Pro-Am, where we spend the morning with professionals and see what they do," said Pres. Patti Roper. They also participated in the Levi Strauss contest and the Bizarre Bazaar. "Working with the Bazaar gives students the opportunity to learn how to coordinate special events and that's an important part of PR," said Roper.

These groups also give students the opportunity to get to know each other better, as well as the teachers within their department and professional contacts. The American Home Economics Association also provides its members with a magazine which helps them become more aware of job opportunities. "The main goal of our group is to provide programs that will enlighten students on what fields are available in that area," said Pres. Libby Searles.

"I think these organizations are important for students," said Peter. "Members get the chance to see what it's really like out there in the big world. They can make sure that type of career is what they really want."

The students don't always learn these things in class, so the development and growth of professional organizations has given them the opportunity to become more aware of what lies ahead of them when they start their career.

Progress: For Students By Students

Student Association

Involvement. That's what Student Association is all about. The 54 senators making up the group gain experience and responsibility as they work to improve the University as well as the community.

At the beginning of the school year, the students elected members of their colleges to make up the Student Senate. Each senator represented 150 students. Another election was held at the beginning of the spring semester to fill the seats of those graduating or resigning senators.

"Under the leadership of President Ken Kearns and Vice President Donna Lambers, the senate has made great progress this year," according to Senator Tammy Dietsch.

"I think Ken and Donna have done a very good job," said Senator Lisa Schmidt. "Ken has gained a lot of respect for the University and has represented us well at the various colleges he has visited around the state."

This year the Student Association held their annual Fall Festival and Spring Expo. They also sponsored a Book Fair, in which the surplus books at the library were sold. The senators also attended The Rally for Higher Education in Frankfort.

The senators are also members of various committees. "The committees offer each member the chance to work with others in a positive and productive manner for the school," said Dietsch.

There's a lot of things that need to be improved on the University's campus, according to Schmidt. The Senate has done a lot of work trying to improve these problems. Some of the legislation the group passed this year dealt with handicap access. They passed bills requiring a handrail be put on the ramp by the Wallace Building, and they also helped make the library more accessible for the handicapped.

The Senate also worked on improving the curriculum and safety of the University. A bill was passed which set up guidelines for the Academic Orientation classes and they changed the final exam policy. Now if a student has three or more finals in one day, he can request that one be changed to another date. Finally, the group voted to make the street by Walters Hall a two-lane street rather than one-lane to solve the traffic problem.

"I think these bills gave the Senate the opportunity to improve University life for the students," said Dietsch.

These projects and others are among the many challenges faced by the Student Senate each year. "This year, I think the ongoing challenge for the Senate has been increased awareness by the University Community," said Dietsch. "I do think Donna and

When trying out for cheerleader, one must perform one floor cheer, a sideline, partner stunts, gymnastics, and a dance, and three minutes are allotted for the individual to perform their routines. After tryouts the top finalists are called back for an interview.

Spirit and enthusiasm prevailed the squad for it received a high return on their investments. spirit award and qualified for the top ten in the cheer.

Jacqueline Thomas, Fort Thomas, said, "The most important goal is to promote spirit in an organized way." The team performed skits, dances and cheers to project this team spirit throughout the year.

Since cheerleading demands numerous hours of practice the members must motivate themselves and budget their time well. Rhule said, "Since it's such a long season, it's difficult to keep everyone motivated for the whole season. Its also difficult to budget your time around cheerleading and studies."

Although cheerleading is a demanding sport; it is also a rewarding sport; for each member is a spirit leader of the University.

The Marching Maroons

It takes a dedicated student to spend at least ten hours a week perfecting the marching band show and receiving only one hour's credit in return.

However, one receives a lot more from being involved with the Marching Maroons than just one hour's credit according to band member Amy DeCamp. "You make at least 150 instant friends and you get to meet different people from different areas. It's a lot of fun."

Below: These band members know how to work this xylophone during halftime at Hanger Field.

It takes endless hours of hard work and dedication to prepare for the marching show performed at each game according to band director Robert Belsar.

The work begins at band camp which is held the week before classes begin in the fall. During this week the group works mainly on the fundamentals of marching because all students come from different schools and they all have unique styles of marching. They have to combine their various styles into a common unity.

The band practices together at least 10 hours a week. They also work a countless number of hours on their own memorizing their music. The group performs a different halftime show at each home football game. "A lot of band members have a hard time with this because in high school the same show was performed every week and this takes a lot more patience and concentra-

"We have brought smiles to many people — young and old. The smiles mean more to me than all the social aspects of being in KDTs," said Cyndy Barney.

Kappa Delta Tau is a unique group at the University because their main reason for existing is service. "The main purpose of KDTs is to provide time, love, care, and service to the campus as well as Richmond and surrounding areas," said Carol Ann Leedy.

Their emphasis on service is reflected through the many projects the group performed throughout the year. They painted the Telford Center, worked at the Bloodmobile, worked at various student elections, collected money for muscular dystrophy, helped the Jaycees with the child identification programs, visited various nursing homes and hospitals and had parties for the residents and sponsored Sunshine Week during the week before finals.

The group also participated in social events. They had a dance,

KΔT Invest in Providing Services for Others

campout, reception for their alumnae, a Parent's Day Banquet and a Senior Day Picnic. These social events exist as a reward for the hard work the group does during the year, according to President Michelle O'Bryan.

This is the area in which KDTs differ from sororities. The sororities' emphasis is more social, while KDTs is more service. "Sororities focus on being together and having fun," said O'Bryan. "We accomplish that, too. By helping others, we help ourselves in return."

The insistent ringing of phones blends with voices and mixed conversations to fill the office which is the heart of the Eastern Progress.

Staff members can be found there working and talking together at almost any hour of the day or night. It often seems more like a large family than the staff of a college paper.

The news and advertising staffs work together toward a mutual goal — to produce the best and most successful newspaper that they can.

To obtain this goal, staff members work long hours with a dedication equal to that of any members of a large paper's staff.

Pride in one's own work and a willingness to help each other come together to make the Progress what it is.

However, staff members are by no means all work and no play. The office blackboard is the focus for creative photos, drawings, and word games to name only a few.

Good natured joking runs wild on most days, lightening the mood and easing the pressures of getting everything done. Even with a deadline fast approaching laughter can be heard, mixed with the bustle of a busy newspaper office.

Milestone: (Mī(ə)l-stōn): 1) a significant point in development. This definition in Webster's Dictionary describes the investment by a few dedicated students who share a common interest of preserving the accomplishments and the Milestones of the University in a book which has gained recognition for its traditional look at campus life. The Milestone staff at the University invest their time, energy, and dedication to receive a return that will be treasured by many.

The organization of the 1985-86 staff was somewhat different than it has been in the past. Instead of having separate editors for each section, the staff contained only four editors: Diana Smith, editor-in-chief; Robert Hughes, managing editor; Laura Strange, copy editor; and Janet Franklin, layout editor. They, along with the staff members, photographers, and contributing writers, worked to produce the 63rd edition of the Milestone and captured the year by the combined usage of copy, photography, artwork and design.

The book was also honored with receiving the PICA award for the 1985 Milestone cover design. Staffers also attended the College Media Advisers and Associated Collegiate Press National Convention in Dallas to bring modern techniques in the production of the book.

The Milestone has become a "significant point of development" in the lives of many — not only the people who work together in producing it, but also those at the University who participate in various activities, follow along with traditions, set their own traditions, and make the year a memorable one at the University.

If students that pray together stay together, Campus Crusade for Christ should remain at the University for some time to come. Having now completed its fifth year at Eastern, "Crusade," as it is often called, is one of 13 registered religious groups on campus. There are over 500 chapters of Crusade nationwide.

Senior graphic design major Tom Jones, chapter president for the fall semester, said that the main purpose of the group is "sharing the life of Jesus Christ with others and giving them the opportunity to have the relationship with Him that we have." Jones said Crusade combines Bible studies, prayer, a weekly meeting, and fellowship opportunities into an ongoing program of spiritual growth. The group also encourages students to attend conferences and workshops designed to heighten understanding and commitment.

While most ministries on campus have advisers, Crusade also has four full-time staff members who live in Richmond. Rich Bostwick, staff director for the University's chapter of Crusade, said the staff's purpose is to ensure that the group operates according to the strategy established by Campus Crusade for Christ International, headquartered in Arrowhead Springs, Colo.

He said this included "persuasion, going to somebody one-on-one and bringing them to the point of decision; proclamation, reaching a lot of people at once, often through large meetings and guest speakers; and presence, providing an example through one's lifestyle."

Campus Organizations Enhance Spiritual Growth

Bostwick, 27, said that the staff works together with the student leadership of Crusade to direct the group. "It's staff directed and student led," said Bostwick.

Jones said he first got involved in an "entry-level Bible-study," his sophomore year.

"I found that Campus Crusade met my needs where I needed them met," said Jones. "It provided fellowship which is what I needed."

University Chaplain George Nordgulen observed that the various ministries like Crusade are aided by the region in which Eastern is located. "We do have a very religious campus because we draw from 'a Bible belt' and we have a good many students interested in furthering their spiritual studies," said Nordgulen.

The chance to gain encouragement and find ways to deal with the rigors of college life were reasons given by students who were involved with Crusade. "Things in my life just weren't right and I thought getting involved in Crusade was what I might need to help things go better," recalled Junior physical therapy major Melanie Woosley, who first attended Crusade's weekly meeting, Prime Time, halfway through the fall semester.

"I think Crusade has been really beneficial to me because it has encouraged me to make God a bigger part of my life ... I've learned a lot from it as far as how important it is to study the Bible and find time each day for prayer. I look forward to going every week," said the Springfield, Ohio, native.

Dionne Brodbeck, a Junior Juvenile Corrections major from Dayton, Ohio, said that ministries like Crusade are an important addition to church because they are attended wholly by college students. "... you make good friends going through the same type of problems: tests, personal and family problems, and all the hassles of school."

She said that since she had become involved in Crusade the previous year she'd "learned what it is to have a personal relationship with Jesus and also how important it is to put God first, above everything else. (Crusade has) changed my life — it really has."

While he said his time in Crusade was beneficial, Jones decided to resign his presidency after the fall semester because the large number of activities he was required to be involved in was "getting in the way of (his) relationship with God."

"Activities should be the result of our relationship with God — not the cause," said Jones. "After all, our responsibility and our loyalty should be to God. That's who we need to focus on — not the groups."

Investment Provides High Return

Johnnie Smith's entrepreneurial abilities provide him with high returns.

A return on an "artistic" investment could best describe Senior Johnnie Smith's college career.

Johnnie Smith Designs is the name of Smith's business which he owns and operates. The senior from Olive Hill, Kentucky, designs and constructs clothing; specializing in sportswear, evening and children's wear.

Graduating in December, Smith obtained a B.S. in Clothing Construction and Design from the University.

Johnnie's work has been both a learning and teaching tool as well as a source of income during his college years. "Embellishing my checking account has been due to my design work. It's helped pay my way through school," said Smith.

He gained much of his experience in the Theatre Department's costume shop. Smith started working during his freshman year and has worked under three designers.

However, there are disadvantages to his work. "I suffered a lack of social contact in college. If I wasn't in class or the costume shop, I was home working on special-ordered designs. I never felt like I was working, because I enjoy designing and construction," Smith said.

Having been commissioned by persons all over the state, Smith has designed for every occasion — from actresses to brides. On the average, he will receive a special order design every two weeks.

"I guess the most pleasure I receive from my work is taking what physical features a person may have and flattering them with my designs."

Greeks share a special bond

A new semester.

Both hectic and exciting. Sorority and fraternity members prepare for the new beginning—one of investments.

Each semester brings new beginnings and new investments. These investments begin with RUSH, the busiest week of the year for both Greek members and rushees.

Plans for rush begin in the spring semester and sororities come to school early to prepare for rush. Formal rush for sororities began the first week of classes.

"Formal rush gives perspective sorority members a broad view of each sorority. By meeting sisters from each sorority, a rushee can decide which organization complements her personality," said Sherry Kaffenbarger, president of Alpha Delta Pi.

Fraternity rush took a positive approach towards a drier rush. They reduced the amount of parties where alcohol was served.

"During a dry rush party the rushees get a better view of the fraternity while the members relate on a more personal basis," said Jeff Braun, Sigma Chi. "I think a drier rush will enhance the quality of the Greek system."

Rush—whether formal or informal — gives students the opportunity to see what each organization stands for and how the entire Greek system operates.

Investments continue throughout the year for members of the Greek system. Striving for a higher quality system, each member invests in the social, intellectual and moral development of the members of the individual group.

Being involved with a Greek organization has both positive and negative returns. Hence Greek life isn't for everyone.

Time and dedication are required of each member. Certain events, such as initiation, weekly meetings, service projects and workshops are mandatory for members to attend. If a potential member doesn't have the time or dedication, a sorority or fraternity may not be right for her or him.

However, a sorority or fraternity does have its positive qualities for other students. With dedication, members can receive many positive returns on their investments.

A Greek organization supports a positive development of each member, but the member must have a desire for this development. A sorority or fraternity benefits a student in many ways. It gives structure and security by creating a built-in family. Involvement in social activities and community service. Opportunities to develop leadership and interpersonal communication skills and lifetime friendships prevail in sororities and fraternities.

A Greek organization is a home away from home. Members, like siblings, share a special bond. A bond which only brothers and sisters can share.

Keeping the Cork on the Bottle

As we look back upon the last twenty years in retrospect, we see an increase in alcohol consumption with the growth of our generation.

We have matured in an alcohol-oriented society, but when this pastime becomes abused and dealt with irresponsibly, it can be fatal to those tampering with it.

Only in recent years have individuals decided to combat this problem. Organizations such as MADD (Mothers Against Drunk Drivers) have been formed to protect and alert the public.

Within this past year, various Greek organizations took positions on the issue of alcohol responsibility.

"Because of the responsibility chapters have to every member, they're increasing alcohol awareness and responsibility involved in that through educational programs," said Troy Johnson, Assistant Director of Student Activities. "They're designing social functions to cooperate with Kentucky State Law."

Pressure was exerted on individual chapters by their national officers.

"Our national organizations are simply trying to protect us," said Carol Gibson, Traveling Collegiate Secretary for Alpha Delta Pi sorority.

Gibson, who serves in this role as a national officer advising chapters nationwide, said she feels that the sororities who are taking a stand on the issue now will be better off in the future.

Some organizations showed responsibility by naming designated drivers after social functions. Others established a system to take car keys when members entered a function. If they were intoxicated at the end of the evening, they did not receive their keys and were provided with alternate transportation. The Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity found that this system was successful for them.

Alpha Gamma Delta began a system in the uprising to require each couple to deposit $5 when they entered the dance. If they were intoxicated at the close of the dance that $5.00 paid for a cab fare.

Alpha Delta Pi also held the first dry dance off-campus held in Richmond.

Members of this organization were also required to ride buses to their spring formal in Frankfurt.

Kappa Alpha Theta members attended dry mixers during the spring.

"We're adhering to the NPC (National Panhellenic Conference) rules that were passed in September," said Cathy Moore, Kappa Alpha Theta President.

Those rules require all national sororities to abide by individual state laws, insure sober drivers, provide key checks, food and alternate beverages (soft drinks).

These provisions are required to decrease the risk an organization may incur in the case of injury to a member or their date. Several national organizations have been named in lawsuits because a member of their organization was involved in a mishap following a Greek activity.

"The Greek system at the University has realized the liabilities and detrimental effects that alcohol has on our activities," said Doug Hartline, Inter-Fraternity Council President. "We have all begun to find that alcohol is a facet of Greek life that the University Greeks don't need."

IFC took a stand by holding a spring dry rush.

When organizing the 1986 Greek Week, the steering committee had to be aware of such risks involved during the week's activities.

"Considering the volatile environment surrounding alcohol-related affairs, Greek Week has, for the first time, undertaken a risk avoidance strategy in all events throughout the week," commented Don Bornhorst, Overall Greek Week Co-Chairman. "We feel that this will not only show the concern of the Greek community on these matters, but will contribute to the awareness of the potential dangers of alcohol abuse."

A step has definitely been taken in the right direction, but the future of responsible alcohol-related activities is in the hands of future leaders on this campus.

Panhellenic and IFC

Entering Greek life at the University is a commitment to involvement and a promise of fulfillment resulting from that involvement. Students who choose Greek life build their futures together through working toward common goals.

The Panhellenic and Interfraternity Councils are the governing bodies over the Greeks on campus. These councils are made up of two delegates from each fraternity and sorority on campus.

In addition to making guidelines for the Greeks to follow, they also sponsor many activities. Together they sponsor Greek Week in April and Richmond children and elderly as Greek friends.

IFC and Panhellenic both participate in many other philanthropic activities. Together they sponsor a non-alcoholic mixer for the pledges to raise canned foods for the area needy. In December they participate in the Hanging of the Greens and caroling to area houses and nursing homes.

Both councils' stated purpose is to strive for better communication between sororities and fraternities as well as the University.

The sisters of Alpha Kappa Alpha set a special goal for themselves to complete at least 10 service projects for the school year. These projects included the Barbara Hunter scholarship, Eldora Rhea scholarship, Adopt-a-Grandparent program, Voter Registration, Bloodmobile, and Halloween-Christmas parties for the Telford Community Center. Their philanthropy project was the N.A.A.C.P. and the United Negro College Fund. These served to help them achieve their goal to become more involved on campus and in the community.

The group also found time for social activities. They sponsored Alpha Kappa Alpha week where various activities were held. They received the third place trophy in the Lambda Chi Alpha Watermelon Bust.

Famous Alpha Kappa Alpha's include Coretta Scott King, Pearl Bailey, Suzette Charles and Shirley Chissolm.

"Let us strive for that which is honorable, beautiful and highest" was the motto for the Kappa Delta sorority.

The 75 sisters of Kappa Delta strived to obtain these goals through participation in social and service activities at the University and in the community. They participated in all Greek activities on campus, including the Sigma Chi Derby, SAE County Fair, Lambda Chi Watermelon Bust, KA Old South, and Greek Week.

Homecoming was a successful event for the KDs. They teamed with the brothers of Beta Theta Pi to win the best float competition. Two KD sisters, Becky Beaumont and Kari Coleman, were members of the 1985 Homecoming Court.

They also had a successful year in service. They raised over $1,000 for the Crippled Children's Hospital in Richmond, Virginia, for their national philanthropy project. They also visited area nursing homes.

It was evident that the members of KD were guided by their motto as they strived to grow both socially and academically through friendship and fellowship.

The sisters of Phi Mu sorority had a productive year, and they planned to increase the productivity of the sorority by strengthening the bond of sisterhood among its members.

To strengthen this bond, the group participated in several social and service projects at the University.

The group participated in several Greek activities on campus and won second place in the SAE County Fair, Beta Theta Pi football, and in the Lambda Chi Watermelon Bust.

The group also sponsored events in the community. They took part in the Adopt-a-Grandparent at Madison Manor. They had a toy cart at Pattie A. Clay Hospital, and they raised money for the Veteran's Memorial in Richmond.

Nationally, the Phi Mu's demonstrated their excellence as a sorority by winning the award

The sisters of Pi Beta Phi valued their close sisterhood, which was an outstanding quality they shared.

The Pi Phis had a successful year in service, scholarship and socially.

In scholarship, the Pi Phis attained the highest grade point average among all of the sororities on campus for two semesters in a row. Nationally, the Pi Phis received the Westchester Award for Improved Grade Point Average.

The Pi Phis excelled in service projects at the University. These projects included Panhellenic and United Way road block. Also, they adopted a member of the Telford Community Center once a month.

The Pi Phis sponsored the Pi Beta Phi Hoedown, which was open to all fraternities to participate in. They sponsored this activity to raise money for their philanthropy, Arrowmont School of Arts and Crafts.

Their close sisterhood was evident in their participation in Greek activities. The Pi Phis captured a first place in both the Sigma Chi Derby and the Lambda Chi Watermelon Bust.

Some famous Pi Phis include Grace Coolidge, Faye Dunaway, Mary Margaret Trumen and Susan Lucci.

"The past semester has been an eventful one—one in which the Betas have grown closer and developed greater bonds of brotherhood," said John LaForge, president of Beta Theta Pi.

The brothers of Beta Theta Pi placed a great importance on service. This dedication was recognized when the Betas received first place for the National Philanthropy Award for sponsoring the best philanthropy. They raised over $18,000 by sponsoring a Jail-A-Thon to benefit the American Cancer Society.

Socially, the Betas sponsored Beta football and basketball. The brothers were overall winners in Greek Week and placed first in the Delta Zeta Frat Man Classic. They also received the originality award for their homecoming float.

The brothers of Phi Beta Sigma hope to enlarge their family and become a more positive force on campus.

To develop their role on campus the group hosted and participated in several events at the University. They had the Blue and White family dinners as well as social dances. The Blue and White family consists of the Phi Beta Sigma's, the Zeta Phi Beta sorority, and the Phi Beta Sigma sweethearts. The Phi Beta Sigmas also received the Homecoming Step Show trophy.

The group was guided by their motto: "Culture for service and service for humanity." They visited nursing homes and raised money to help the elderly people with their heating bills in their effort to promote service in the community. Their philanthropy project was the United Way.

The group was also active in intramural sports at the University and participated in flag football, volleyball and basketball.

The brothers of Pi Kappa Alpha worked together to make this year a successful one.

For the thirteenth consecutive year, the men of Zeta Tau Chapter sponsored the Dream Girl Pageant to choose the women who would appear on their Dream Girl Calendar. The pageant was just the peak of a week full of activities. This week was called Pikes Peak Week and was held in the spring semester.

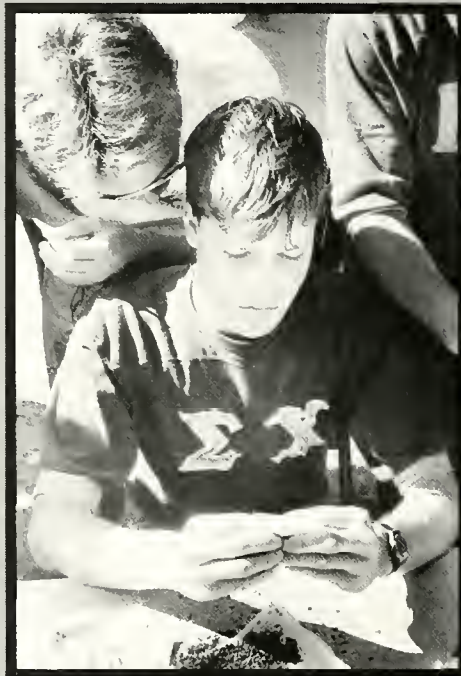

The Pikes won several sporting events including second place in football, second place in TKE basketball and first place in the campus tug-of-war tournament.

A.B. "Happy" Chandler, Dan Issel, and Colonel Harlan B. Sanders are some famous Pikes.

The brothers of Sigma Chi achieved many goals this year. Aside from having a successful rush, the Eta Alpha Chapter participated in many campus activities. Among these activities were Brothers Day, intramural sports, Kappa Alpha Theta Halloween Party and Greek Week.

During the fall semester, the brothers sponsored their annual Sigma Chi Derby Week. This year's Derby was one of the most profitable with a donation of $1500 going to their philanthropy, Wallace Village.

The brothers also attended the Kentucky Province Workshop held at Western Kentucky University. Eta Alpha Chapter had a higher attendance than any other chapter.

"Increase the pride within the chapter and excel at everything we participate in," said Theta Chi President Guthrie Green.

The men of Theta Chi have been active on campus in several service projects. The fraternity was involved in raising money for Cardinal Hill Hospital, on the University's campus. Also, the philanthropy for the fraternity is the Statue of Liberty in its celebration year. Chosen second in the DZ Frat Man Classic, the Theta Chis are proud. They also, sponsor the Fall Quarter's Tournament and in the spring a Rally Week.

Some famous Theta Chis include Chrysler Magnet, Lee Iacocca and Movie Fame Steven Spielberg.

THE YEAR HAS DRAWN TO A CLOSE. As we reflect back to the goals we set at the beginning of the school year, we evaluate each one for its point of return. Our experiences at the University helped us to mature by allowing us to help preserve Universi ty traditions and set our own traditions. As we graphed each point, we developed our investment and return pattern. While some of our points were peaks and others were not, we achieved the highest possible

Return on our Investments

LAST WRITES

When I started college four years ago, one of the goals I set for myself was to become editor of Eastern's yearbook. Now, with my job completed, I sit at my desk with mixed emotions—relieved, excited and saddened.

I'm relieved I don't have any more interviews to rush to, pages to layout and check, and stories to write. All the pressure and responsibilities have vanished.

Excited doesn't begin to explain how I feel about this book. When I decided to become editor, I wanted a unique Milestone, a book like no other seen by the University before. I believe we have captured the trends and moods of an up-to-date yearbook.

Most of all, I feel saddened. It's time to leave a valuable part of me behind. As I sit here, I think about how scared I was when I wrote my first story, all the trips to Delmar Publishing Company and to the conventions in St. Louis, Louisville and Dallas, and, most importantly, all the friends I've made along the way. It's going to be difficult to leave it all behind.

To Larry Bailey, Bill Stoess, Becky Alexander and Greg Whalen, thank you for the tremendous amount of support and encouragement you've given me. I'll never forget any of you or all the good times we shared together.

I also want to thank all the contributing writers: Shelia, Dan, Sherry, Scott, Robert, Theresa, Debbie, Tiffany, Laura and Becky. Your writing abilities provided us with a strong copy book. A special thank-you goes to Dr. Libby Fraas.

Also, I want to thank our contributing artist, Jeff Coatney. Thanks also to Marlene Daughtery, Debbie Swinford, Debbie Cole and Jeff Koonce.

To the staff and photographers, thank you for all your dedication and hard work. Paul, I don't know what I would have done without your endless hours of work and harassment.

Laura, I don't know where to begin. You've been a great friend and you've kept my sanity. Your journalistic skills are an important part of this book.

To my managing editor, Robert Hughes, I couldn't have made it without you. Thanks so much for everything you've done, and don't forget the trips to Dallas and Charlotte.

I would also like to thank my sisters of Kappa Alpha Theta; my parents, Tommy and Thelma; and my high school yearbook advisor, Glenda Thompson, for all their encouragement. It's greatly appreciated.

I hope you enjoy the 1986 Milestone as much as I enjoyed putting it together! God bless you all.
